2,000 WORKERS HEAR JOHNSON'S NRA SWAN SONG

Tears of Aids Follow His 'Good-by.'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Picture on Back Page.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Before 2,000 NRA employés who overflowed the auditorium of the huge Commerce building and strained their ears to catch every word, Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson this afternoon made his farewell address, issued his "last call for dead cats."

Johnson's swan song was a tour de force in which he mingled classical and Biblical allusions with the more picturesque phraseology of the battlefield. He quoted the Bible, Omar Khayam, "Madame Butterfly," and the world war poet John McCrae, and had included, for his benediction, a passage from one of the psalms. When he came to this, however, the scene was too much for him. He broke down under the emotional spell, said simply, "God bless you," and then removed his glasses to wipe away the tears.

Spectators agreed that it was the best show Hugh Johnson has ever put on in the fifteen and a half months of his turbulent career as NRA administrator.

2,000 Like a Congregation.

The 2,000 employés, all devoted and loyal to this man who had given them good government jobs, were as silent as a congregation during prayer. There was only one ripple of laughter, elicited by a reference to "the dead cats," and at the end many a handkerchief was used besides Johnson's.

For the first time Johnson's secretary and administrative assistant, Frances Robinson, effaced herself, remaining alone in an anteroom off the speakers' platform. Heretofore she has always sat with Johnson on the stage, but today she waited until he had finished, then came to the platform to join him as the crowd surged up for the handshaking. "Robbie" turned in her resignation today, but will remain with Johnson until his final report is finished and he leaves on Oct. 15.

If there was something of a churchly atmosphere about the farewell ceremony it was perhaps because Johnson sought to make it so. He spoke in the strident tones of a cavalry officer but with the lofty fervor of an evangelist, and referred to NRA as "this holy thing." And there could be little doubt in the minds of the listeners that the speaker really believed his cause was holy.

Proud of "His Baby."

In a defiant outburst Johnson proclaimed to the world that, whatever may happen to NRA in its reorganized form, it was Johnson who gave it its policy and method.

"It is our baby and nobody can take it away from us," he said.

In another instance, however, he modestly disclaimed his own contribution and traced the inspiration for NRA to the founder of Christianity.

"You can treasure in your hearts," he said, "your part in as great a social advance as has occurred on this earth since a gaunt and dusty Jew in Palestine declared, as a new principle in human relationship, 'the kingdom of heaven is within you,' delivered the sermon on the mount, and proclaimed the golden rule.

"Our work is but a distant echo of those ancient precious precepts which have changed the face of the whole world. 'Echo' is not the word. 'Effect' is the word. In one short year, under the leadership of our inspired President, you have done more for those who are weary and heavy laden than all the militant organizations for social conflict that have existed in this or any other country since the beginning of time."

Then He Quotes Omar.

After tracing briefly the achievements of NRA, "this holy thing" which he said he approached with the feeling of a man mounting the guillotine, Johnson summed it up with "we brought the whole of American industry and commerce within the principles of NRA under the Blue Eagle within six months." Then he moved solemnly into his apologia, quoting Omar to answer his critics:

"And it is ours—to us—black and white on the record. There it stands, written and irrefutable, and—as to our detractors who have opposed all these things—'nor all their piety nor wit can call it back to cancel half a line, nor all their tears wash out one word of it.'"

Takes Board to Replace Him.

He seemed to find solace in the fact that it was not to an individual but to a board that the administrative affairs of NRA were turned over after his resignation,

Johnson spoke with deep feeling

START INSULL'S TRIAL TODAY; TO LAST 4 MONTHS

All Details Ready; 17 Defendants.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Samuel Insull and 16 co-defendants will go on trial this morning before Judge James H. Wilkerson in the federal court on the charge of having used the mails to defraud investors through the sale of $143,000,000 in securities of the Corporation Securities company.

For the first time in a federal court proceeding here, the judge in the Insull trial is to be robed. To comply with the practice of the bench in other areas, the four judges of the Northern District of Illinois decided yesterday to don judicial gowns while presiding over criminal trials, civil jury trials and naturalization proceedings.

On Judge Wilkerson falls the task of inaugurating the sartorial departure. Judges Barnes, Sullivan and Holly will follow suit.

Twelve Lawyers in Arena.

Preparations were complete yesterday for the Insull trial, which participants expect to last four or five months.

The government has 200 witnesses and 2,500 exhibits, for which special shelves have been built in the courtroom. There will be four prosecutors headed by United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green, and eight defense attorneys headed by Floyd E. Thompson.

Sixty-six prospective jurors of the regular venire will report at the opening of the case at 10 o'clock and Judge Wilkerson has ordered a special venire of 60 to report on Wednesday morning. The court would accept no excuses for business reasons yesterday and these pleas will be heard from the box this morning.

Rule Out Stockholders.

Three of the venire failed to appear in court and attachments were ordered issued for them. The jurors will come from the northern tier of Illinois counties, chiefly from the smaller cities and towns. One of the first efforts will be to weed out the holders of Insull stock, who once numbered 600,000.

All witnesses in the case are to be excluded from the courtroom, with the exception of six accountants for each side. The other witnesses will be kept in Judge Wilkerson's outer chambers. Whether the jurors will be locked up has not been decided. Trial hours have been fixed from 10 to 4:30 p. m. each day, with an hour's recess at noon.

Preparations for News Men.

There will be room in the courtroom for 250 spectators. A bar has been placed across the hallway and guards will control the crowds by a small gate. The nation-wide interest in the case is shown in the preparations for the newspaper men. A long table has been placed in the courtroom at the rear of the tables for the lawyers, where thirty or more reporters will be seated. Outside a special press room has been set aside, next to the jury-room but shut off from that by specially built partitions. Here telegraph instruments have been set up for quick transmission of the courtroom news.

Besides the elder Insull and his son, the defendants are:

FRANK K. SCHRADER, director of Corporation Securities.

CLARENCE T. MAC NEILLE, secretary and treasurer of Corporation Securities.

WALDO F. TOBEY, counsel for Corporation Securities.

CLARENCE B. WHITWORTH, auditor for Corporation Securities.

EDWARD J. DOYLE, president of the Commonwealth Edison company.

Mr. Green will be aided by Leo J. Hassenauer, his first assistant, and by Leslie E. Salter and Forest A. Harness, special assistants to the attorney general. Mr. Harness was the attorney sent to Greece and Turkey to bring Mr. Insull back home. At the defense table beside Mr. Thompson will be John J. Healy, former state's attorney of Cook county; George I. Haight, Frederick Burnham, James G. Condon, J. Fred Reeve, Charles Lounsbury, and Harry Ditchburne.

German Prince Named in Row of Vanderbilts

New York, Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Testimony accusing Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, widow of Reginald C. Vanderbilt, of intimacy with Prince Frederick of Hohenlohe was part of the evidence offered today before Supreme Court Justice Carew. The testimony was in opposition to Mrs. Vanderbilt's petition to regain custody of her child, Gloria Laura Morgan Vanderbilt, from the child's aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Emma Sullivan Keislich, who had been the child's nurse almost from the time of her birth, was on the witness stand all day, being questioned by Herbert C. Smyth, counsel for Mrs. Whitney, and cross-examined by Nathan Burkan, counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Testimony that she saw Mrs. Vanderbilt and the German prince in Mrs. Vanderbilt's boudoir in Paris was only part of the testimony she offered to support the contention of Mrs. Whitney and Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt, that the latter is not a fit person to have custody of the little girl.

Charges Greed Perils Child.

Miss Keislich also testified that "greed, managing and manipulating" threatened the 4 million dollar heiress when she visited her mother's home at 49 East Seventy-second street. On cross-examination, the nurse said:

"Little Gloria is a very wealthy child, and where there is money there is 'greed, managing and manipulating.' That house was unprotected, with people going in and out at all hours of the night. There was no way I could tell who was in the house."

Early in her testimony Miss Keislich said Mrs. Vanderbilt's friends in Paris and Biarritz, where she went after the death of her husband, included Prince Frederick, Constance Bennett, film actress; a friend from the Argentine and a man "who was running some hotel, who was not of the gentleman type."

"To what extent was this prince there?" asked Mr. Smyth.

Together for Two Years.

"He was there all afternoon and went out later and returned at night while we were in Paris. I saw them together daily for two years. He was about 25 or 26 years old. When he went to Biarritz, he lived in the same house and had a room on the same floor as hers. He was there all summer."

Asked by Mr. Smyth if she had ever

MR. 'B.' SOUGHT IN MYSTERIOUS SPEER MURDER

Northfield, Mass., Oct. 1.—(AP)—The investigation of the slaying of Dr. Elliott Speer, headmaster of Mount Hermon school, took a dramatic turn today as Lieut. Albert Dasey, chief investigator, announced he was seeking and would arrest a mysterious Mr. "B," reportedly a close friend of the slain man.

The man, it is understood, is well known in western Massachusetts, and is familiar with the grounds of the Mount Hermon school where the Speer residence in which the shooting of the headmaster took place is located.

Speer was felled by shotgun slugs fired through the window of his study on the night of Sept. 14.

Desert Orders Tipsy Wedding Party to Court

Sharp criticism of Waukegan and Crown Point justices and clerks who lend their official aid to "drunken marriages" was voiced yesterday by Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort.

Judge Desort's outburst occurred during his hearing of the anullment suit brought by Mrs. Ethel E. Thompson, 22 years old, 4215 Prairie avenue, Brookfield, against her husband, Daniel R., 21 years old, an oil salesman. Mrs. Thompson was in court with her attorney, Walter C. Wellman.

Taking the stand, Mrs. Thompson admitted that she was under the influence of liquor when she married Thompson, whom she had met only a few hours before.

"Comes To" on Way to Altar.

"I went to a New Year's party in the city last Dec. 31," she said. "There I met Mr. Thompson and most of us at the party had a lot to drink. I was intoxicated and lost my power of reasoning. When I came to we were on our way to Waukegan, about 4 o'clock in the morning of New Year's day.

"We got our license and were married in Waukegan by Justice of the Peace Harry Hoyt. It wasn't until the next morning that I realized the foolish thing I had done. I left my new husband at once. We have never lived together as man and wife."

Recital Amazes Judge.

Judge Desort had listened with amazement to the woman's recital. Turning to Attorney Wellman he said:

"I refuse to make an immediate ruling on this annulment. I have had all too many of these drunken weddings to undo. It is high time that some steps be taken to put a stop to them. I intend to find out whether those who are empowered to perform marriages are more interested in their fees than in the future happiness of young people who pay doubly for such folly—in money and in wrecked lives."

He ordered Mrs. Thompson's attorney to produce in court Mr. Thompson and all of the members of the party who witnessed the wedding, and continued the case.

May Call "Marrying Justice."

After adjournment Judge Desort indicated he would make an effort to have the Waukegan justice appear in court also.

"Many of the divorce and annulment cases in my court had their inception in Waukegan or Crown Point," he said.

"It is time some one found out whether or not marrying officials are in the habit of joining people who are too drunk to realize the importance of the step they are taking."

4 Stricken by Arsenic in Food Sent Informer

One county jail prisoner died last night, and two others were in a critical condition from arsenic poisoning, in what authorities believe was a plot to kill a fourth prisoner, thought to have given information to the state's attorney in an assault to kill case.

The dead prisoner was Rocco Pisano. The two prisoners who were taken to the County hospital are Nick Ginaris and Fred Woods. Physicians described Ginaris' condition as "serious," and said that Woods had an even chance to recover.

All three were cellmates of Harold Clifford, believed to have been the intended victim. Because he was not hungry Clifford ate only sparingly of a portion of the sandwiches brought in to him, which he believed to have come from his sister.

The remainder of the sandwiches he passed on to his cellmates. Clifford was made only slightly ill by the arsenic contained in the sandwiches.

Held in Constable's Killing.

Clifford is one of four men indicted for the shooting on Aug. 10 of Constable John Griffin of Bellwood. After the shooting the assassins bundled their victim into an automobile and were preparing to bury him, believing him dead. While the gunmen were hunting a shovel Griffin revived and escaped.

Two others are held with Clifford on the assault indictment, but the fourth, Edward Deveau, 24 years old, is a fugitive.

Immediately on discovery of the poison plot city and county authorities renewed their hunt for Deveau, believing he may be implicated in the attempt to poison Clifford. Although Assistant State's Attorney Richard Devine refused to comment, it was rumored that Clifford has been negotiating with prosecutors with the intention of becoming a state's witness in the case. The two others held in the county jail with Clifford are Edward Kunowski and Frank Estes.

The poison plot evidently was laid with care and with considerable knowledge of jail procedure. According to Edward Nettles, assistant jailor, a sister of Clifford's has been in the habit of bringing him a lunch at about 4:30 p. m. Shortly before that time Sunday a man came with a package for Clifford which was marked only by his name. This package, containing a number of hamburger sandwiches, was sent up with another left as usual by the sister later, and Clifford assumed both were from her.

Gives Food to Cellmates.

Not hungry at the time, Clifford ate but a little and gave what remained of the sandwiches to his cellmates. Within two or three hours Pisano, Ginaris, and Woods became violently ill and Clifford also was ill, though not so seriously. Jailers called Dr. Francis McNamara, jail physician, who administered first aid and pumped the victims' stomachs, sending the contents to Dr. J. L. White of the health department for analysis. Dr. White reported yesterday the finding of a large quantity of arsenic in the food.

Constable Griffin, who is 22 years old, was shot five times in front of a Melrose Park saloon when he was seeking Deveau for questioning about the false registration of Deveau's automobile. After the shooting, Griffin, believed to be dead, was thrown into a car by the gang of assassins and driven to the intended burial place near the drainage canal route of Cicero, from which the wounded constable escaped.

Griffin, who is recovering at his Bellwood home after a long stay in the Frances Willard hospital, told a dramatic story of the attack and his escape, while still a patient in the hospital.

Tells Story of Escape.

"I pretended I was dead," he said, "when they dumped me out of the car. Then two of them went for spades to bury me, and two others went away to get a glass of beer. I got back into one of the cars and started for help."

Griffin drove by a circuitous route to a Cicero fire station. From the fire station he was rushed to the hospital, where he recovered sufficiently to leave for home three weeks ago. Afterward Griffin named Deveau as the man who fired the shots.

With Deveau the only alleged assailant still at liberty, police believe solution of the attempt to poison Clifford will lie in Deveau's arrest, or that of the unidentified man who brought the poisoned sandwiches to the jail.

Montana Rancher to Wed Woman Seen as Girl, 3

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Robert Tinklin, 57, Montana rancher, is en route to Wales to wed the woman he faintly remembers as a tiny girl thirty-six years ago. The bride-to-be is Doris Addicott, 39. She nursed Tinklin's mother in her last illness. They exchanged Christmas cards and have corresponded ever since. They will be married at Barry, south Wales. Tinklin ranch is fourteen miles from Broadview, Mont., and comprises 2,000 acres.

BUSINESS SENDS A CHALLENGE TO LABOR ON TRUCE

Urges President to Proclaim It.

New York, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The issuance of a proclamation by President Roosevelt for a "truce on industrial warfare," during which present employment relations would be continued, was urged today by the National Association of Manufacturers, challenging the American Federation of Labor to take a similar action.

"The manufacturing employers of the nation have been and are now ready to coöperate with President Roosevelt in sound measures to restore cordial employment relations and speed economic recovery," the manufacturers' statement said.

"The President will find employers willing to sit down with him, as he proposes, to devise means for ending the constant series of strikes which have been one of the major obstacles to recovery.

Made Suggestion to President.

"In July, 1933, the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers sent to Gen. Johnson a memorandum recommending the issuance by the President of a proclamation similar to the following doctrin laid down by the National Council of Defense during the world war and subscribed to by Samuel Gompers, then president of the American Federation of Labor:

"'Neither employers nor employés in private industries and transportation systems should attempt to take advantage of existing abnormal conditions and the country's necessities to change existing labor standards in employment relations which they are unable to change under normal conditions.'

"Soon thereafter the industrial advisory board of the NRA, composed of outstanding industrialists, signed with the labor advisory board a joint statement which was heralded widely as embodying the patriotic principle of industrial peace under which neither employers nor employés would use the emergency as a lever for fortifying their position.

Not So Accepted by Labor.

"Unfortunately, the statement of 1933 was not so accepted by organized labor representatives who signed it. None would contend that unionization of workers was more necessary to combat the depression than it was to win the war.

"But union leaders have gone ahead steadily, calling one strike after another with the sole objective recognition of their unions in which, by their own statements, less than 4,000,000 workers are enlisted.

"The President is assured that employers, with a large stake in recovery, are desirous of seeing this situation ended and they will coöperate to the fullest to obtain peace. They are ready to join, as the President urges, in laying aside the weapons common to industrial warfare, if they must be used at all, until the more normal period following the existing emergency.

Makes Challenge to Labor.

"The employers of the nation will welcome the proclamation of a truce period, similar to that during the war, in which neither group nor the government will attempt to change existing relationships by force, and challenges organized labor to bring forth a similar acceptance from its convention now in session.

"At the same time we urge that in the formulation of any further legislation consideration be given to the system adopted in Great Britain of making unions legally responsible in every state for their acts."

DOUBT AND CONFUSION

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—The financial fraternity of the country reacted lugubriously today to last night's message from President Roosevelt, and in the ranks of industrialists there was doubt and some confusion.

In the world of stocks and bonds and credits and capital the President's words failed to cheer, and the markets, sluggish and inactive for months, dropped a few listless points.

Bankers and financiers who had signed pleas to Mr. Roosevelt, begging him to announce his monetary policies, to return to a gold standard and a balanced budget, found not even a mention of these in his speech, and though none could be found with temerity to speak his mind publicly there was a general under cover feeling that the stagnation of capital and of capital industries will continue indefinitly.

Out where the chimneys of industry send their wisps of smoke into the skies, manufacturers and workers were seeking to pierce through the generalities of the President's remarks in which he disclosed a proposal to strive for a moratorium on labor strikes.

Reading carefully the text of Mr. Roosevelt's speech in the newspapers, the manufacturers understood that the President, within a month, plans to summon small groups of employers and workers who are representative of larger groups, there to ask them to negotiate agreements as to wages, hours, and working conditions; to agree further to settle all subsequent disputes by private or governmental mediation, and meanwhile for a "specific trial period" to agree to suspend strikes entirely.

The attitude of President Green and other labor leaders seemed to be that they would enter the Roosevelt strike moratorium only if they were guaranteed the right to insist upon recognition of their unions.

Some See Perkins' Influence.

Since this right has been disputed by countless employers, and since the issue of recognition has been the motive of a great majority of the strikes occurring in the last year, it is not clear how Mr. Roosevelt intends to bridge the issue.

Some employers, seeing in the President's suggestion the fine hand of his radical secretary of labor, Miss Perkins, expressed fears that it forebode a demand that all employers recognize the organized labor unions, those affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

If this is held true, it is difficult to determine how the President could obtain agreements to a strike moratorium. It would be difficult or impossible, it was urged, for the President to draw into White House conferences representatives of all the employés represented in company unions. At the same time, if he dealt at all with the company union problem, and recognized such organizations, he would invoke the wrath of the American Federation of Labor union leaders.

May Award Emblems.

It was thought possible that the President has in mind a general form of agreement to be negotiated between individual employers and whatever union representation their workers might have. Under such an agreement it might be stipulated that wages, hours, and working conditions would remain at fixed levels for a definite period, possibly for two years. Changes would be made only by peaceful methods, and all parties would pledge themselves to avoid strikes.

Emblems similar to the Blue Eagle might be awarded to all plants operated under the President's agreements, and consumers might be urged, as in the case of the Blue Eagle, to patronize only manufacturers who display the President's strike moratorium emblem.

Most commentors could find no other clew to what is in the President's mind, and there was no explanation of any kind obtainable at the White House. The President's secretary, Stephen T. Early, refused to give any details.

Mr. Early did say that the White House had been deluged with congratulatory messages, and that only four telegrams had been received expressing adverse sentiments. The senders of these four messages, Mr. Early said, wanted to know why the President had not balanced the budget.

One large industrialist, whose name was not disclosed by Mr. Early, telegraphed, according to the secretary, that he was ordering two new additions built to his plant in anticipation of increased business inspired by the President's speech.

Subterfuge, Says Green.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 1.—(AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, charged "that is a subterfuge" when told today the National Association of Manufacturers had challenged the A. F. of L. to enter an industrial truce.

"Let them first publicly announce they will obey the decisions of constituted authorities, as the President suggested last night," Green replied.

"They can issue no challenge to labor—they can make no protests—until they have first agreed publicly to abide by the decisions of these constituted authorities."

Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation, asked, "What do they mean by a truce?

"Do they mean that the thousands of cases of discrimination shall not be corrected?

"Do they mean that we are to abandon collective bargaining? The President has asked us to proceed through collective bargaining."

GUILTY OF THROWING STENCH BOMB.

Supreme Court Dismisses Case Testing New Deal Laws

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—A case involving legality of New Deal laws was dismissed by the Supreme court today on motion of the government, which had discovered a flaw in its case against J. W. Smith and four other Texans charged with producing more oil than the state quota permitted.

James Crawford Biggs, solicitor general, asked for dismissal because President Roosevelt's executive order on oil production had omitted the alleged offense. This error was noted only recently, after the government had appealed the case from an adverse decision by the eastern Texas District court.

Two Other Cases Stand.

Two other oil cases still before the court, however, assail the constitutionality of section 9-C of NIRA and the oil code. In these two issues the government won in the lower courts against the Panama Refining company and the Amazon Petroleum company, whereas it had been defeated in the Smith case.

The Biggs motion, with three others of minor importance and the admission of two dozen lawers to practice, consumed all the twenty-five minutes of the court's brief session beginning its 1934-35 term. Recess was taken until next Monday, to consider meanwhile various petitions and to prepare for a busy fortnight during which arguments will be heard each week day. Decisions will be handed down Oct. 8 and 15.

Chamber Is Packed.

The quaint, historic chamber—to be deserted next May for the new marble building—was packed to its limit with visitors and attorneys when the crier's deep voice announced the arrival of Chief Justice Hughes and his associates. Profound silence reigned and every one stood while the black robed justices slowly took their seats on the dais. All were present except Justice Van Devanter, who only lately returned from Europe, following the death of his wife.

Next to Mr. Van Devanter's seat was Justice Brandeis, whose name has come into renewed prominence since Gen. Johnson said he had discussed the NRA with the justice.

Late in the day, the chief justice and his associates paid their respects to President Roosevelt and were his guests at tea at the White House.

about the NRA underlings who had sent expressions of their sentiment and inquiries as to what their future might be after his resignation. He called it "beautiful and touching and quixotic but . . . sentimental foolishness."

"If from failing hands I 'throw the torch,'" he quoted, "'be yours to hold it high, if ye break faith with us who die, we shall not sleep, though poppies blow in Flanders field.'"

Further addressing his critics, the speaker said the crucifixion of a man often means more to the thing he is trying to do than all his living efforts, and quoted, as his philosophy under the circumstances of being forced to to leave his "baby," the "last words of Madame Butterfly, engraved on the haft of her Samurai dagger":

"Con onore muore. Chi non puo serbar vita con onore," which Johnson translated:

"To die with honor when you can no longer live with honor."

SEAMEN TO CANCEL STRIKE, CHAIRMAN OF U. S. BOARD SAYS

New York, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the National Labor Relations board, announced tonight that officials of the International Seamen's union had assured him the seamen's strike, originally called for Oct. 8, would be canceled.

This decision, he said, was reached following a conference called on Sept. 27, by the labor board between the union and representatives of 25 leading steamship lines.

Decision of the union to cancel the strike, Garrison said, was announced to him by Victor Olander, secretary of the union "and other leaders."

WORK FOR ALL WHO SEEK JOBS, GOAL OF GREEN

30 Hour Week Is Coming, Delegates Told.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Organized labor's determination to bring about distribution of the available jobs in America among "all those who are able and willing to work" was proclaimed here today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in opening the annual convention of the federation.

The 30 hour week was envisioned by the stocky, gray haired labor leader as one of the possible means of wiping out unemployment. Cheers and applause rose from the convention floor as Green referred to it.

The federation began what delegates called the most important convention in the federation's history.

Start Shorter Week Drive.

A drive for the establishment of the 30 hour week throughout industry by appropriate legislation was launched by the federation's executive council prior to beginning of the sessions. The council advocated a living standard which would "use the capacity of our industries and the capacity of our man power."

"Those opposing the 30 hour week offer no other remedy," Green said. "I can only repeat the challenge I have made before: Let them offer us something better as a remedy."

Estimating the number of jobless in the country at 10,000,000, including about 2,000,000 now having government relief jobs, Green said the unemployment situation was the greatest problem before organized labor.

Building Trades Issue.

Among other issues facing the convention was the question of readmitting the international unions of carpenters, bricklayers, and electrical workers to the federation's building trades department—still unsettled after several days of pre-convention battling. The dispute between the three unions and the building trades department administration has threatened to disrupt that branch of the federation.

The federation's attitude toward reorganization of the NRA, on the formation of single unions to embrace all workers in a particular industry as against organization by crafts, and on unemployment insurance remain to be determined.

The federation president referred to some of these problems in addressing the convention.

He said President Roosevelt's administration had done much toward relieving unemployment, "but the fact remains that it has not gone far enough."

Opposes Any Unemployed.

"It would have been better," he said, "that we never had a scientist or inventor than to have created a vast army of unemployed."

Green said the federation was not opposed to progress or to the mechanization of industry, but to "the displacement by machinery of thousands of workers."

Recent strikes throughout the nation were said by Green to have been caused "by hostile employers who refuse to permit their workers to engage in collective bargaining."

Green said social insurance problems would be taken up by the convention and a definite program evolved. He promised "a militant, aggressive organization determined to carry it [program] into effect."

"We want to make America," he said, "a nation where men work and children play."

The convention would demand national and state legislation prohibiting child labor, he forecast. It also would ask, he said, enactment of laws providing for compensation insurance and old age insurance.

Expressing opposition to "subversive forces" he declared "communism in any form whatever" and fascism are enemies of organized labor.

He asserted "as long as organized labor remains sound, communism will never gain a foothold in America.

Advising the convention to proceed with caution, Green said:

"Knowing our action here perhaps will have a profound effect on the economic and even the legislative policies of the nation, we shall proceed, cautiously, deliberately, exercising our best judgment."

Paul Scharrenberg, secretary of the California State Federation of Labor, in an address before the convention, said:

"There are only two kinds of unionism we don't want. We don't want company unionism and we don't want communist unionism."

AUTO DEALER CITED IN FIRST HEARING ON ILLINOIS NRA LAW

Carbondale, Ill., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—What is believed to be the first NRA case to be filed under the recently enacted Illinois NRA law appeared in Jackson county Circuit court today against E. W. Volger, Carbondale auto dealer. The complaint was filed by Attorney Fred Schmann of Granite City for the auto code authorities and was signed by E. K. Spencer, Duquoin auto dealer, an official of the code authority.

The complaint alleges that a Ford agency owned by Vogler at Metropolis, Ill., through a representative of the firm, Fred Harper, allowed more for a trade-in when he sold a machine to Mae Hawkins than the code calls for.

Mr. Vogler, being owner of the Metropolis agency, must answer to the NRA charge. He said today the alleged violation by Harper was done without his knowledge.

The hearing on the case is set for tomorrow before Circuit Judge George White of Marion.

The complaint also calls for a permanent writ restraining Vogler from future alleged violations. Today, however, he said there would be no more violations and that he expected to plead guilty to the charge as indicated in the complaint.

STATE'S NRA LAW HELD INVALID IN WEST VIRGINIA

Welch, W. Va., Oct. 1.—(AP)—West Virginia's NRA state enforcement law was held unconstitutional today by Circuit Judge Beno F. Howard. In his opinion he declared the state had no valid right to exercise its police powers to enforce industrial codes.

The court denied a petition for an injunction asked by Prosecuting Attorney Wilson Anderson of McDowell county to prevent C. G. Killem, a sawmill operator, from working his employés more than 40 hours a week and paying some of them less than the 28.5 cents an hour required under the lumber and timber products' code.

Only State Law Affected.

Judge Howard emphasized his opinion involved only the state act, which places police power behind code enforcement. He said:

"There is no dispute between labor and capital herein involved. The employés of the defendant, if not satisfied with their hours of labor and wages, have the right to bargain with their employer and agree upon such terms of employment as are satisfactory to them.

"This right is guaranteed by the National Recovery act and it is not the purpose of this decision to interfere with that right in any manner."

Counsel for Killem contended the state NRA act violated both the federal and the state constitutions. Judge Howard in his decision ruled:

"There can be no question but that the fixing of hours of labor and wages to be paid, as prescribed by the code in this case, involves the liberty and property of both the employer and employé, which are protected by the constitutional provisions invoked."

Holds Rights Are Infringed.

Judge Howard said the state act informed the defendant "he can buy the necessary machinery and equipment to set up a sawmill and when he has done that, he must employ laborers to work 40 hours per week, pay them not less than 28.5 cents per hour and sell his finished lumber at a certain price."

"That is not regulation," the court held. It is management, control and dictation. It converts a private enterprise into a public utility. It is a confiscation of liberty and property without due process of law.

"It forbids two parties having a lawful capacity—under penalties as to the employer—to freely contract with one another in respect to the hours of labor and wages per hour in a purely private enterprise where both are willing to agree. It makes the employer and employé mere agents of the state and is tantamount to government ownership."

The jurist said there is but one possible pedestal "upon which to rest such legislation, and that is that there exists an acute emergency which justifies the court in ignoring the constitution." He added the declaration by the West Virginia legislature, in enacting the act, "that 'an emergency exists' does not create an emergency in fact."

MISS ROBINSON GETS PLACE AMONG STATUES OF THE NEW DEALERS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—(AP)—"Robbie," faithful shadow of her boss, Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, has followed him into a permanent place in Sculptor Reuben Nakian's hall of fame.

Nakian, self-appointed immortalizer of the New Deal, who is making a series of twelve busts of Roosevelt aids to range in a circle around a larger figure of the President, reported today that Miss Frances Robinson had been selected because:

"She belongs in the New Deal, whether she's in or out."

"Robbie," labeled by Nakian as "the silent Portia of the NRA," made known today that she had followed Johnson's lead in resigning from the recovery administration. But, said the sculptor:

"She's history now. She has been in the thick of the fight. Spent all her mind, energy, and time just like these other fellows——."

He nodded up at his row of cabineteers and brain trusters, the more than half a dozen New Deal figures ranging the wall of his tiny studio down the hall from Gen. Johnson's offices. Secretaries Hull, Ickes, Wallace, and others such as Johnson, Donald Richberg, and Rexford Tugwell all were there.

Why the Railroads Ask Increased Rates
The railroads are confronted with increased costs of operation amounting to $293,000,000 on an annual basis, due to restoration of wages to the 1931 level and advances in prices of materials.
To meet in part these increased expenses, the railroads are asking for a moderate increase in freight rates estimated to yield approximately $172,000,000 a year.
Inasmuch as the increased expenses will be incurred in handling traffic, it seems reasonable that such traffic should share the increase with the railroads.
It is earnestly hoped that the public will understand the necessity for action and the reasonableness of this request.
Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

REFUSES TO END BUS INJUNCTION; GIVES UNION ONE

Prystalski Assures Right to Picket Peaceably.

Circuit Judge John Prystalski refused yesterday to dissolve the Chicago Motor Coach company's injunction restraining members of the striking union from interfering with its buses. In the same decision he issued a counter injunction prohibiting the company from interfering with the union.

JUDGE PRYSTALSKI.

The judge's ruling did not directly affect another injunction which had been obtained against the striking union by members of the bus company union, the Chicago Motor Coach fraternity, and which the strikers also sought to terminate. Judge Prystalski is to rule on this injunction next week.

In sustaining the company's injunction, the court made several modifications in the order issued several weeks ago by Judge Stanley Klarkowski. While the striking union, local 1022 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employés, was enjoined from bothering the buses, Judge Prystalski granted it permission to picket, to assemble and to solicit members.

Take Union Chief to Jail.

"This does not mean you can bring bums in to picket," Judge Prystalski asserted. "Only employés of the company who are out on strike have the right to picket."

During the afternoon Ralph Stoltzmann, president of the union on strike, who was indicted on Saturday as an accomplice in the murder of James Kelly, a bus company employé, was committed to the county jail. He was in custody of the state's attorney's office over Sunday.

The evidence so far against Stoltzmann is contained in the confessions of six of the seven men indicted with him. Two of these men, Albert Semple and Edward Nacki, said to be the actual slayers of Kelly, have admitted they were hired to "slug" Kelly by Earl Renner, who, in turn, is alleged to have stated he was hired by Stoltzmann.

Prosecutors were busy preparing their cases against the eight indicted, and First Assistant State's Attorney Wilburt F. Crowley announced the trials of the men would be started as soon as possible. One of the eight, Joseph White, a street car employé, is a fugitive.

Seek Ball Bearing Thrower.

Several squads were sent to the south side late in the day by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney to search for the man who shot the ball bearing which struck Mrs. Mary Kennard, 65 years old, of the Hyde Park hotel while she was riding on a bus. Mrs. Kennard died two hours after her injury, but a coroner's jury determined she had succumbed of "natural causes."

Members of the Street Car Men's union, Division 241 of the Amalgamated, meeting last night in Car Men's hall, Ashland avenue and Van Buren street, voted to support Stoltzmann after they had heard reports of officers at their regular meeting last night. Another 50 cent assessment of the 15,000 members was ordered to support the bus strike.

In the hearing before Judge Prystalski, Attorney Maclay Hoyne, representing the striking union charged that the bus company had violated section 7A of the NRA on collective bargaining.

The judge announced he was considering ordering a vote among the employés of the company to determine how many favored the Amalgamated union, an affiliation of the American Federation of Labor.

seen any intimacy between Mrs. Vanderbilt and the prince, she said:

"One night during the second summer we were in Biarritz, Mrs. Morgan called me about 2 or 3 a. m. I got up and looked in Mrs. Vanderbilt's door and they were in the bed."

"Who?"

"Prince Frederick and Mrs. Vanderbilt. The light was on in the hall and I could see through the doorway."

"Could you tell whether they were asleep?"

"Seemed to Be Crying."

"They were not."

"How could you tell?"

"Mrs. Vanderbilt seemed to be crying, the prince was lying beside her. She was in her night clothes and he in his pajamas."

"Did you ever see anything like it before or after?" asked Justice Carew.

While the nurse was giving her testimony Mrs. Vanderbilt sat at the counsel table with her sister, Consuelo, the wife of Benjamin Thaw Jr. She pursed her lips frequently and shook her head during the testimony. Mrs. Whitney was an attentive listener. The child was not in court.

Testifying as to happenings in Paris after Mr. Vanderbilt's death, the nurse said:

"Very often she [Mrs. Vanderbilt] was out all night. That was her life. I could hear her come in at 6 in the morning. I could hear them talking and feeling very good."

"Who are 'they,'" asked Mr. Smyth.

"The man she came in with," replied the witness, but the answer was stricken out on objection of counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt.

"While we were in Paris," continued the nurse, "Mrs. Vanderbilt used to sleep late and was usually in bed half the day. About 1 o'clock I would bring in the child to see her. Gloria would stay about ten minutes while her mother got ready to go out for lunch."

"To what extent did she play with the child or watch after the child's activities?" Mr. Smyth asked.

"She never did."

"What about cocktail parties, if there were any?"

"Plenty. As I came in with the child around 5 in the afternoon I'd see them drinking downstairs."

No Playroom for Child.

The nurse testified that she and the child occupied a small room together, while Mrs. Vanderbilt and her brother each had large rooms. The little girl had no playroom, she said.

"Who were Mrs. Vanderbilt's friends at the time?"

"Well, Miss Constance Bennett and a south American lover," replied the witness, but the answer was stricken out. "Well, her friend from the Argentine, then. Then there was Prince Frederick. He was practically a member of the family."

Miss Keislich said that when they lived in Paris, after Mr. Vanderbilt's death, the late Harry Hays Morgan, American consular officer and father of Mrs. Vanderbilt, stayed two weeks and then left, saying he did not want to associate with Prince Frederick.

Miss Keislich told of finding pictures of nude men and women in Mrs. Vanderbilt's apartment in Paris. She said she saw Prince Hohenlohe put such a book down when she entered the room, where he was sitting with Mrs. Vanderbilt, and believed the prince had been reading the book to her.

The witness said that on one occasion the child was burned by a cigaret in the hands of the prince, and when asked by the court if it was an accident, she replied, "Mrs. Vanderbilt and the prince said it was an accident."

Cross-examined about her testimony as to the intimacy between Mrs. Vanderbilt and Prince Frederick, the witness said she recalled that Mrs. Thaw had spent a month there and that "perhaps" the two sisters had occupied the same bedroom.

Miss Keislich testified that twice during the week of Sept. 16, when Gloria was visiting her mother, she had threatened to jump out of a window if she could not get away.

She described in detail an incident mentioned in her affidavit, in which she said Mrs. Vanderbilt tried to teach Gloria to mix cocktails.

1934 NOBEL PEACE PRIZE MAY GO TO BRITISH AUTHOR

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

OSLO, Oct. 1.—Sir Norman Angell probably will receive the 1934 Nobel peace prize, according to M. Olden, president of the Norwegian Peace society.

Sir Norman Angell, economist, author and former member of the British parliament, has written several books on international topics, many of them dealing directly with questions of peace and war.

In "The Great Illusion," written four years before the outbreak of the world war, he developed the argument that war is economically outdated, and that its costs were so great that both victor and vanquished were in reality defeated.

2 MORE PERSONS BECOME INVOLVED IN ARSON INQUIRY

Trial of 3 in Printing Firm Fire Opens Today.

Preparations for the resumption of the trials of members of the so-called $1,000,000 arson ring before Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court were made yesterday by the state's attorney's office as two new figures became involved in the investigation, which so far has resulted in the indictments of close to seventy-five men and women.

The trial of three alleged arsonists as a result of the burning on Oct. 4, 1932, of a building occupied by El Nacional, a Spanish newspaper at 737 South Halsted street, is scheduled to start this morning.

Ellis Goldberg, an insurance adjuster and also said to be a former bucket shop operator in Michigan, was further implicated in the activities of the arson ring yesterday in an extradition hearing in Cleveland, O., after proceedings had been started by Cook county officials last week. He was identified by Mrs. Bertha Warshovsky, confessed "arson queen," and Jack Brown, an alleged "torch" and public adjuster.

Identified as "Torch" Hirer.

Both Mrs. Warshovsky and Brown identified Goldberg as the man who hired Mrs. Warshovsky to set fire to a hardware store at 4618 Lake Park avenue. The witnesses have been taken to Cleveland by Lieut. Thomas Kelly of the state's attorney's office.

The extradition hearing is to be reopened later in the week. Goldberg is also being held in Cleveland on an embezzlement charge.

Max Klein, 50 years old, 1920 Crystal street, a junk dealer, is the other person who became involved yesterday in activities of the arson ring. He was named in an arson warant issued by Judge Matthew Hartigan in the Felony court. Klein was named by Valentine Notari, who has confessed starting incendiary fires, as having dickered with him to set fire to Klein's building, at 1923 Crystal street, in January, 1933. Klein and Notari could not agree on a price for setting the fire, so Klein hired another incendiarist to perform the job for which he collected $7,750 insurance, Notari said.

Trial Set for Nov. 1.

Klein, according to the state's attorney's office, has collected various amounts of insurance in the past for fires which destroyed his garage, his automobile, and as the result of a fake accident. His trial was set for Nov. 1.

Prosecutors say Klein's actions indicate he is building up an insanity plea for himself. He accuses every person of being a "torch."

The first trial growing out of the arson trust activities resulted in three defendants pleading guilty and being sentenced. They are Nick Basuris, owner of the Metropolitan Press; Abe Blank, and Rudolph Pisani. The men scheduled to go to trial this morning are Sam Fraga, owner of the Spanish newspaper, and Sam Romano and Harry Brown.

Robbers Ask Gold Bonds of Cobbler; Get 2 of $500

Two robbers masked with handkerchiefs bound Martin Kozinski in his shoe repair shop at 1445 Blackhawk street yesterday afternoon. Addressing the cobbler in his native Polish, the bandits demanded his gold bonds. Kozinski denied owning any, but the gunmen found two $500 bonds in a trunk. Taking these, $10 from the cash drawer, and a revolver, they drove away.

ALL RED SHADES ARE FLOURISHING IN MINNESOTA

Socialism or New Deal Is Choice.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 1. — [Special.]—In Minnesota "you pays your money and you takes your choice" between shades of radicalism.

GOV. FLOYD B. OLSON.

Republican conservatism is a voice drowned in the whirlwind of clamor for public ownership, cancelation of farm debts, deflation of corporation capital, redistribution of wealth, leveling of classes, mortgage moratoriums, communistic Utopias, "soak the rich" taxes, abolition of capitalism, the totalitarian state, greenbackism, Marxism, and numerous others isms. The Republican party itself is threatened with relegation to third place in the state.

The choice at this writing appears to be between the collectivism of the Democratic New Deal and the frankly Socialistic program of the Farmer-Labor party, which has tricked out the Populism of the '90s in ruddier garb and revived the late Mary Elizabeth Lease's adjuration to Kansas farmers to "raise less corn and more hell."

Radical Doctrines Prevailing.

There is abundant evidence that the more radical doctrines are going to prevail, that the Farmer-Labor party is going to reëlect its United States senator, Henrik Shipstead, to a third term and reëlect its governor, Floyd Bjornsterne Olson, likewise, to a third term.

In a last desperate effort to wrest the state from the clutches of radicalism, the business men and others conservatively minded, alarmed, and infuriated by what they consider his partiality to the union in the recent truckmen's strike in Minneapolis, are endeavoring to organize a fusion opposition to the candidacy of Gov. Olson.

They have launched the United Minnesota Voters, to ascertain by referendum in several hundred communities whether the conservatives prefer to unite behind the Democratic candidate for governor, John T. Regan, an Al Smith conservative, or the Republican candidate, Martin A. Nelson, a young lawyer and war veteran. Unless such fusion can be arranged, the reëlection of Gov. Olson is a foregone conclusion. That fusion can be effected appears to be doubtful, Mr. Regan already having branded the move a Republican trick.

Farmer-Labor Radical to Democrats.

Radical as are the New Dealers in Republican eyes, no less radical are the Farmer-Laborites in Democratic eyes—at least for political consumption. The New Dealers are lifting their hands and rolling up their eyes in holy horror at the crimson hue of the Farmer-Labor platform, which they aver was torn almost bodily from the communistic pages of Karl Marx's "Das Kapital."

Congressman Einar Hoidale, Democratic candidate for United States senator, has challenged Senator Shipstead to say whether he stands on that platform.

The senator, looking for both Republican and Democratic support, has neatly sidestepped, saying that he stands on his record. Gov. Olson, similarly challenged by opponents and business interests, has sought to minimize the redness of the platfrom, asserting it is not so radical as it sounds.

At the Farmer-Labor headquarters in St. Paul I asked for the text of the party platform. They were sorry they did not have it, were all out of it, but furnished me a pamphlet interpreting the platform which omitted the most radical declarations.

'Tis said the Farmer-Laborites withdrew the platform text as a campaign document when they found how much it was embarrassing Senator Shipstead, Gov. Olson, and other candidates. Thereupon the Republicans had it printed as a campaign document and are distributing it at Shipstead and Olson meetings.

Here Are Reddest Planks.

Most sovietish of the Farmer-Labor platform planks is this one:

"We, therefore, declare that capitalism has failed, and immediate steps should be taken by the people to abolish capitalism in a peaceful and lawful manner and that a new, sane, and just society be established; a system where all the natural resources, machinery of production, transporation, and communication shall be owned by the government and operated democratically for the benefit of all the people and not for the benefit of the few.

"In order to bring about this cooperative commonwealth, and for the purpose of adopting legislation for the immediate relief of the people, the Farmer-Labor party adopts as its platform the following proposals."

Among the listed proposals was this one:

"To protect our citizens from exploitation through industrial profits, we demand public ownership of all mines, water power, transportation and communication, banks, packing plants, factories, and all public utilities."

Farmer-Laborites Cover Up.

But the canny Farmer-Laborites hastened to add in their platform declarations that such public ownership should not extend to "bona fide coöperatively owned and operated enterprises," like the 6,000 grain elevators, creameries, and other farmer coöperatives owned and operated chiefly by Farmer-Laborites.

The platform declared for "graduated taxes effectively administered on large incomes, gifts, and inheritances," for the purpose of "the restoration of unearned wealth to the community and state," and for the exemption from taxation of "homesteads in the city and on the farms to the value of $4,000." After thus planninig the redistribution of wealth, the Farmer-Laborites proposed "the immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus by treasury notes and the repeal of the economy act."

If there is one thing more than any other the radicals cannot abide it is economy in government, their theory being that the more money the government spends, the bigger the pay roll will be and the heavier the tax burden loaded onto the rich to effect the redistribution of wealth.

What Pamphlet Says.

By way of explanation of the plank declaring for repeal of the national economy act, the Farmer-Labor interpretative pamphlet says:

"We cannot restore prosperity by lowering wages and reducing the standard of living. Purchasing power must be increased rather than decreased."

The Farmer-Laborites advocate that the state "take over idle factories, operate these factories by unemployed, and distribute the products to relieve destitution among the needy," a plan similar to Upton Sinclair's epic program in California, recently embraced by the California Democratic convention.

The platform advocates the nationalization of banking, which "is fast approaching, through the operations of the RFC and the guaranty of bank deposits."

Then the platform comes out for greenbackism, modern version, declaring that:

"All money should be issued directly by the government and made full tender in payment of all debts; all money permitted by law to be issued against the gold now in the United States treasury should be put in circulation by the payment of all government bonds due, or soon to become due, and in payment for all public works construction; there shall be no further issue of interest bearing bonds."

When he is feeling normally anti-capitalistic Gov. Olson proclaims, as he did in a speech last night, that the "damnable system" will be changed "if we have the courage to insist on it."

"We will not be frightened by the calling of 'communist' and other names," roared the six foot, 200 pound governor.

But Governor Reneges.

But when waited on by insurance men, alarmed by the Farmer-Labor platform declaration "that all insurance be taken over by the state and operated without profit," the governor soothed them with the assurance that this referred only to workmen's compensation, old age pensions, and other forms of "social" insurance.

Critical comment was to the effect that the words "operated without profit" were superfluous in view of Minnesota's experience with state operated farm credit. There are now 60 million dollars of farm credit bonds outstanding, the payment of interest on which is increasing the tax levies, and the prospect is that the state eventually will own a lot of defaulting farms.

MRS. BAUR BIDS 1,500 REPUBLICAN WOMEN TO CAMPAIGN RALLY

Invitations to the first organization meeting of Cook county's Republican women will be mailed today to 1,500 Republican women, Mrs. Bertha Baur, national Republican committeewoman for Illinois, announced yesterday.

The invitations, in verse, advice the women that the meeting will be held in conjunction with a luncheon at the Drake hotel at 12:30 Wednesday, Oct. 10. Representative Hamilton Fish will speak. The meeting will mark the first organized effort of Republican women to assist in the approaching congressional elections.

Invitations, originally intended only for "precinct patriots," now are being extended to various Republican club leaders, business women and women who "have a voice in their community," as well as precinct workers. Candidates for public office, although not scheduled on the program, will be guests.

As an opening wedge in the women's campaign, Mrs. Baur will address three large groups of women this week. Today at 2 p. m. she will speak before the Oak Park Women's club, of which Mrs. H. G. Lorimer is president, at the Carleton hotel, 1110 Pleasant avenue. Thursday at 8 p. m. she will address a massmeeting of women of the 43d ward at 624 West North avenue, and Friday she will speak before the Illinois League of Republican Women, meeting at the Morrison hotel. Next week she will make a tour of southern Illinois.

G. O. P. LEADERS OUST R. E. CROWE IN LOYALTY DRIVE

Push County Campaign to Bolster Ranks.

BY PARKE BROWN.

To use the language of a statement issued on the subject, Robert E. Crowe, former state's attorney was "unconditionally released" by the Cook county Republican organization yesterday.

That expression was used in the formal announcement that the county central committee has ousted Samuel' O. Shaffer as its representative in the 29th ward. Shaffer was elected with Crowe's backing. The organization committee hereafter will recognize Robert E. McMillan, former municipal judge, and Joseph Orrico, leader of an anti-Crowe ward club, as agents in the ward.

Second Step in Loyalty Drive.

This is the second step the central organization has taken to rid itself of elements its considers disloyal in the present campaign. Several weeks ago the committee announced it had replaced Paul W. Rothenberg in the 24th ward with a committee.

The announcement concerning former State's Attorney Crowe was issued by William H. Reid, chairman of the organization committee of the central committee and read:

"Pursuant to the announced determination of the Cook county Republicans to purge themselves of all elements and individuals faithless to our party and its ideals and who persist in their nefarious schemes to deliver us to our enemies in the November elceiton, the organization committee is pleased to announce that it has definitly stripped former State's Attorney Crowe of his 29th ward Republican organization.

Charge Secret Deals.

"A majority of the precinct committeemen of that [Crowe] organization complained of the lack of interest in the election on the part of Shaffer. He was called in and was confronted with the charges. His reply was unsatisfactory and more than convincing of a determination to continue his old policy.

"Mr. Crowe's unconditional release will enable him henceforth to become affiliated openly with Pat Nash and his Democratic cohorts with whom he has been dealing heretofore secretly and behind closed doors to exert a sinister and bipartisan influence over our courts, our parks, and all other branches of our local government.

"If Mr. Crowe is going to save any Democrat from further embarrassment or prosecution he will have to do it as a Democrat and not as a Republican. By the same token, if the Democratic organization is to favor Crowe with patronage and lucrative appointments it will have to be in the same capacity."

Former State's Attorney Crowe, with this announcement called to his attention, did not hesitate in his reply.

"The present Republican organization," he said, "reminds me of a once fine mansion formerly occupied by nice, decent people that has been abandoned, its windows shattered, its doors hanging from their hinges, the plumbing, fixtures and other metals torn out and carried away, a wreck inhabited by tramps and infested with vermin.

"I am not interested in anything that is said about me by Reid and his old partner 'High Pockets' O'Brien, the slot machine man."

Former Judge McMillan has been secretary of the Crowe ward organization since 1922. Orrico ran Shaffer a close race for the ward committeeship last April.

Floyd M. Kenlay, president of the Illinois Young People's organization, announced that it had indorsed the Republican nominee for county judge, Samuel Heller, in preference to the Democratic candidate for reëlection, Judge Edmund K. Jarecki.

FIFTH SUSPECT IN MITCHELL GEM THEFT IS NAMED BY JURY

Dominic Dinardi, 22 years old, Chicago, was reported named in a true bill voted yesterday by the Lake county grand jury, charging him with robbery while armed. Dinardi was allegedly one of five men who in November, 1931, invaded the Lake Forest home of William H. Mitchell, Chicago broker, and robbed the Mitchells and several guests of jewelry valued at $250,000. Four of the men already have been convicted and are serving sentences of one year to life. Most of the jewelry has been recovered. Mrs. Leslie Wheeler and Mrs. Edward Cudahy of Lake Forest were among the witnesses who testified before the grand jury.

TRY HAUPTMANN IN JERSEY FIRST, IS LATEST PLAN

State Proposes to Seek Early Extradition.

New York, Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Officials of New Jersey indicated today that they were preparing to assume responsibility for the prosecution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the German alien who has been held here on a charge of extortion in connection with the kidnaping and murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr.

Following a conference with Attorney General David T. Wilentz in Trenton, Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey, asserted that he "probably" would move for the prisoner's extradition to face charges of murder and kidnaping before Oct. 10, when District Attorney Samuel F. Foley is planning to put Hauptmann on trial for extorting $50,000 ransom from Col. Lindbergh.

Hold Conference Today.

Mr. Foley, invited to attend a conference at Trenton tomorrow to discuss the case with Gov. Moore and his attorney general, had promised to place no obstacles in the way of Hauptmann's removal, provided New Jersey has a legal case against him.

On this point there is disagreement, it was learned. Some hold Hauptmann cannot be charged with the kidnaping from the Lindbergh home in Hopewell until direct evidence of the former German machine-gunner's presence in Hopewell on March 1, 1932, the night of the abduction has been found. Others hold that expert testimony to prove that Hauptmann wrote the note found pinned to the baby's empty crib is sufficient.

Attorney General Wilentz was asked if the state's case against Hauptmann was complete; he replied.

"No, if it were complete we would extradite him right away."

Seek More Evidence.

The attorney general's statement was interpreted to mean that the New Jersey officials believe they have enough evidence to warant Hauptmann's extradition, but that they are still hoping to find more conclusive proof to insure conviction upon trial.

H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of New Jersey state police, revealed later that a person who had claimed to have seen a stranger in the vicinity of Lindbergh's former home on Sourland mountain had been able to identify Hauptmann from his pictures. Troopers, he said, had shown photographs of the suspect to several hundred persons in the neighborhood of Hopewell without arousing a flicker of recognition.

Schwarzkopf denied a report that his troopers had Hauptmann in their hands as a suspect months ago, only to let him slip through to fall ultimately into the net spread for him by New York City police and agents of the department of justice.

Hauptmann was "on a trip" when the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped, and when he returned a week after the abduction he had an injured leg, according to friends of the Hauptmanns, the New York American said today.

Search Hauptmann's Place.

Meanwhile efforts to discover the evidence needed to send Hauptmann to the electric chair continued on many fronts. In New York it centered about the dismantled house at 1279 East 222d street, where the suspect lived.

Although the garage in which Hauptmann had secreted $14,950 of the ransom bills which Dr. John F. Condon paid on behalf of Lindbergh for the return of the kidnaped child, has been demolished, policemen dug up shrubbery and trees on the grounds around it. Then they turned their attention to the house.

Plumbers dismantled plumbing fixtures. Carpenters removed windows from their sashes and probed in the sashweight pockets for evidence without success. Workmen in the yard smashed up a concrete pool which Hauptmann had built for a baby alligator he had brought back from Florida.

Mushroom Expert Dies from Poison Toadstools

Charles A. Reis, 42 years old, 425 Bowen court, Elgin, died yesterday of mushroom poisoning in St. Joseph's hospital at Elgin. He was considered an expert at distinguishing the edible from the poisonous varieties of fungi. Reis was taken ill two weeks ago after eating mushrooms gathered by a friend in Lords park, Elgin. His wife, also taken ill, recovered. Reis, a watchmaker, came to Elgin from South Bend, Ind., five months ago.

WILLIAM B. DENNIS

Department of justice agents from the office of Melvin Purvis took a statement last night from a Chicago civil engineer who declared that he had seen Bruno Hauptmann on a lonely road near Hopewell, N. J., the night that the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped.

The man is William B. Dennis, 48 years old, of 3252 West North avenue, and he stated he had seen Hauptmann while on a motor trip in the east with his wife, Adelaide.

Nearly two years later, Dennis stated, he saw the same man in a small hunting settlement at New Mooselookmeguntic, Me. That was in October, 1933. He only realized he was Hauptmann, however, when he saw a picture published recently in THE TRIBUNE, Dennis said.

Tells of First Meeting.

The first encounter, according to the statement, came when he and his wife were driving near Princeton, N. J., and only a few miles southeast of the Lindbergh home at Hopewell. He observed a car standing by the road and a man signaling for him to stop.

Dennis said he did so and the man he later recognized as Hauptmann asked to borrow his tire pump. Dennis loaned it and helped the other pump up a flat tire. The car, he said, was a gray four door sedan, apparently one of a medium priced make.

There was a woman—a blonde—in the front seat, the statement continued. He attempted to strike up a conversation with both her and the man who had first accosted him, Dennis said, but both were reticent and replied only in monosyllables.

The man Dennis says was Hauptmann spoke in a deep voice and with a pronounced German accent. Dennis recalled that his acquaintance pronounced the word "good" as "goot." In the rear seat of the car was another person, but the darkness inside the machine made it impossible for Dennis to determine whether it was man or woman.

This person apparently had some bulky object on his lap. Either that, Dennis said, or the person was very fat.

This was about 9 p. m. on the night of March 1, 1932. The Lindbergh baby was kidnaped some time between 8:30 and 10 p. m.

Dennis said he thought no more of the incident until his motor trip took him to Denniston, Me., three or four days later and he had an opportunity to read the details of the kidnaping in the newspapers. He intended to relate his experience to authorities, Dennis said, but was persuaded by his wife not to do it.

Wife Objects to Publicity.

"She said it would only mean I'd be 'pushed around,' bothered, and made conspicuous," the engineer explained.

Last fall when he saw Hauptmann in Maine, Dennis said, he recalled the flat tire incident to the other man's mind.

After first pretending not to remember, the man finally admitted recalling the incident, but after a few brief remarks left abruptly.

When Dennis saw the picture of Hauptmann in the paper and recognized it as one of his chance acquaintances he determined to make the facts public.

The agents will submit the statement to Mr. Purvis this morning and he will communicate with those in charge of the investigation in the east to ascertain whether they will want Dennis to confront Hauptmann.

FRIEND OF WIFE STABS HUSBAND AFTER QUARREL

Maurice David Reisman, 26 years old, of 832 Sunnyside avenue was stabbed twice and critically wounded last night by a man whom he had accused of paying undue attention to his wife Ruth.

At the Lake View hospital, where Reisman was taken, with knife wounds in his side and abdomen, he refused to talk about the fight. However, Sergt. Everett Mullaney learned the story from the wife, and police are seeking Joseph Pedroza, 906 Wilson avenue.

Mrs. Reisman said she had known Pedroza for some four or five months and that her husband had quarreled with her about him. Yesterday morning, after a quarrel, he left the house.

Last night he was seated in his parked car outside the home when he saw Mrs. Reisman and Pedroza approach. Just as they were about to enter the house, Mrs. Reisman said, her husband leaped out and attacked Pedroza, who stabbed him.

HOPE TO END GRANT-CHERRILL MARITAL CLASH

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill both were "hopeful" tonight their domestic rift soon would be patched up.

Miss Cherrill, former leading lady for Charles Chaplin, the comedian, late today visited the home she occupied with her 6 foot 1 husband to pick up a few clothes, but she did not remove all her belongings.

"I'm still in love with Cary, and I hope, and feel certain, that we will be able to patch things up and continue with our marriage," she said.

Grant had expressed similar hopes.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

MOTOR LICENSES FOR 1935 READY WITHIN 2 WEEKS

Arrangements Rushed to Speed Enforcement.

Illinois' 1935 automobile license plates have been manufactured and packed for distribution and most of the license application blanks already have been printed, it was disclosed in Springfield yesterday by John Mash, head of the license division of the office headed by Secretary of State Hughes. Within the next fifteen days, Mash said, all arrangements for the sale of the plates will be completed.

With preparations thus far advanced, it was pointed out here by observers, Secretary Hughes is in position to establish a new precedent by making the new plates available to motorists from 60 to 75 days prior to Jan. 1. If this procedure were followed through, it was explained, the secretary of state would be able to demand police enforcement of the state licensing laws immediately after the turn of the year.

Move to Speed Revenue Collection.

In the past motorists in many cases used their old licenses for from two to four months of the new year and consequently the cash from this source found its way into the state's coffers in driblets.

The state laws specify unequivocally that the new license plates shall be placed on all motor vehicles after Jan. 1 of any given year. Yet records from the secretary's office disclose that on last April 5—three months after the beginning of the year—there were still more than 300,000 passenger cars and trucks in Illinois which were unlicensed for 1934.

Plan to Dodge Christmas Rush.

Secretary Hughes could not be reached yesterday, but Mash explained that one of the chief delays in the past has been the request of postal authorities that the license plates be held in Springfield until Dec. 26 each year. The request, he said, was prompted by the desire of the department's officials to handle the plates after the Christmas mail rush was over.

"There is no reason why the plates should not be sent out during the next 60 days is there?" Mash was asked.

"The plates and the applications are ready," he replied. "Mr. Hughes is to determine within the next day or two just how and when we will distribute the plates. Presumably, the secretary finding no objections, the plates could be made available to all motorists through at least the last two months of this year so that none would have reason for using his 1934 license after Jan. 1, 1935."

Mash disclosed that there is to be no change in the method of numbering on the 1935 licenses, spiking rumors that the plates would indicate the county in which the purchaser had registered as well as the number of the plate. Mash also announced that there will be no change in the plan of giving low license numbers to those now holding these low numbers providing they make application for the plates thirty days prior to Jan. 1.

The 1935 plates will be in a new color scheme—ultramarine blue on a background of pearl gray. The only other change in the plates is the moving of the "Illinois," which in the 1934 plates was along the bottom edge, to the top of the 1935 plate.

PAYMENT OF PHONE REBATE TO START ON OCT. 15; TO TAKE YEAR

Payment of the $20,700,000 rebate to subscribers of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, as ordered in the ruling of the United States Supreme court last spring, will begin on Oct. 15. Notice of the payment was contained in an interim report, approved informally yesterday by Judge Evan A. Evans of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and filed by the telephone company with the clerk of the District court.

The report, filed by Attorney Kenneth Burgess, said the company expected to issue 5,000 checks a day for a year to users of the four coin box services, until 1,175,000 are mailed out.

Of this amount, 15,000 are less than $1; 1,000,000 are under $25, and 160,000 are between $25 and $100. This refund, company officials estimate, will be about 14 per cent of the subscribers' payments. The present rate reduction, recently effective under the court ruling, represents, roughly, the same percentage.

The rebate and rate reduction ordered by the Illinois Commerce commission in 1923, received the final judicial stamp of validity only last April, eleven years later.

Wife of Graphite Firm Chief Sues for Divorce

Mrs. Mildred R. Patterson, 2915 Lake avenue, Wilmette, filed suit for separate maintenance in the Superior court yesterday against her husband, Robert W. Patterson, whom she describes in the bill an an official and operating head of the Vesuvius Graphic corporation, 168 North May street. The bill, drawn by the law firm of Socrates, Davis & Cohen, charged that the Pattersons were married on Jan. 14, 1914, in Los Angeles and that Patterson deserted his wife on April 18, 1934. She charges him with drunkenness and cruelty and asks custody of their children, Robert Jr., 18 years old, and Patty Ann, 13.

FAIR SETS NEW ATTENDANCE AND FINANCE RECORDS

Exposition Goes Into the Final Month.

BY EARL MULLIN.

A Century of Progress exposition entering its final month yesterday, moved up into several enviable niches in the Hall of Fame. The two outstanding accomplishments dealt with attendance and finances. The final month opened with ideal weather, and thousands of sightseers attended the exposition during the day. At midnight 60,471 had entered the grounds.

Supremacy over all other international expositions in financial management and in return to investors is now safely established by Chicago's great fair. More than half a dozen attendance marks have been bettered and still another is due to topple within the next week.

Passes St. Louis Record.

The 1934 exposition yesterday passed the mark established by the Louisiana Purchase exposition of 1904 in St. Louis. In 187 days it drew an attendance of 12,804,000 persons. The 1934 Chicago Fair in its 128th day exceeded that figure.

The other outstanding accomplishment was the eighth 10 per cent payment on the outstanding gold note issue. While precise data as to the financial return on foreign expositions could not be found in the files of the Fair, its was established that no major American exposition has come within striking distance of the financial record made by A Century of Progress. As bond holders went to the City National bank to collect their money all indications were that yet another payment would be made before the Fair closes. Yesterday's payment amounted to $814,620.

Get 110 Per Cent of Principal.

Comparing the Fair notes with Liberty bonds investors may well be pleased with the return made on their show of confidence in Chicago and Chicago's destiny. Selling in 1929, the Fair notes now have paid eighty cents on each dollar of principal, plus interest at 6 per cent. To date the money returned to investors has been, counting interest, 110 per cent of their original investment. Figuring the same way, if Liberty bonds were purchased and sold at par, counting interest at 3 per cent, the investor would have received 115 per cent.

Passing the Louisiana purchase exposition's total attendance yesterday the 1934 Chicago Fair now has moved into fourth place among American expositions, and will move into third place within another week.

Only Two Fairs Ahead.

At that time the only American exposition to have bettered this year's show will be the two previous Chicago Expositions, in 1893 and 1933. In addition, the 1934 Fair has bettered records established by eleven other international expositoins.

The 1933 Chicago Fair hung up an all time mark for expositions to consider, being exceeded only by two French expositions, and in their case the attendance figures quoted are open to question. Tickets for the French expositions also were lottery tickets, and many thousands were purchased for their lottery value and never used for admissions.

List Major Expositions.

Location—	Year.	Days open.	Attendance.
Philadelphia	1876	159	8,004,000
Chicago	1893	179	21,480,141
Atlanta	1895	90	818,000
Nashville	1897	155	1,274,000
Omaha	1898	153	1,778,000
Buffalo	1901	184	5,107,000
St. Louis	1904	187	12,804,000
Portland	1905	137	1,589,000
Jamestown	1907	219	1,481,000
Seattle	1909	139	2,766,000
San Francisco	1915	288	13,127,103
Paris	1889	185	25,398,000
Paris	1900	210	37,287,000
Brussels	1910	199	5,500,000
Philadelphia	1926	184	6,408,289
Chicago	1933	170	22,565,859

With the exception of the San Francisco Fair of 1915, with an attendance of 13,127,103 the 1934 Chicago Fair has passed all American expositions except the Columbian of Chicago in 1893 and A Century of Progress in 1933. With the burden of running the second year Chicago is this year exceeded only by its own previous records.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

The air mail pickups, made three times daily on the south lagoon at the Fair, were canceled for yesterday on orders of the department of commerce bureau of aeronautics. The plane used was showing signs of strain in the fuselage from the repeated pickups at high speed of the heavy mail bags. The fuselage was being strengthened yesterday with a light metal and the pickups will be resumed today.

Final tabulation of more than 100,000 ballots cast during the past two months in the Sears Century of Progress contest to find the most beautiful baby in America will begin this morning. Prizes totaling $40,000 in cash and educational policies will be awarded in the contest.

Free guide service for groups of from 25 to 40 persons will be furnished at the Art Institute World's Fair art exhibition this month. Arrangements for dates and hours must be made by telephoning the tour department of the Art institute, Central 7080.

Einar G. Johansen, described as a "virtuoso on musical saws," will be featured in a musical at 8 o'clock tonight in the Illinois Host House. Others on the program are Renee Engel-Lidge, Margaret Agoston, Elvira Rakos, and Hedwig Thomas, pianists, and Lucy Atkinson, mezzo-soprano.

Dr. Edward C. Lindeman of the New York School of Social Work will be the speaker in the Chicago Woman's club lecture in the Illinois Host House this morning in another of a series of lectures on "Society Tomorrow."

The Wilson & Co. pavilion at the Fair is becoming more famous for its pretty girls than for its steak dinners. Dorothy Le Ford was one of the three beauties chosen from employes at the Fair to represent the Exposition on a tour of the middle western states early in the summer. Saturday night Miss Cynthia Von Dohlan, Wilson pavilion employé, was chosen Miss United States to compete with beauties of other nations for the title of Miss Century of Progress. Selection of Miss Century of Progress will be made through a vote of visitors.

Twenty-four inmates of the Martha Washington Home for Crippled Children yesterday visited the Fair as the guests of Frank Mandel of the downtown department store. They were taken around the grounds in wheel chairs.

CHICAGO PAGEANT BACKERS GUESTS OF MAYOR KELLY

More than 275 men and women who aided in making a success of Chicago's Homecoming week and the Drama of Chicago on Parade were entertained last night by Mayor Edward J. Kelly with a banquet at the Chicago Athletic club. Civic leaders, heads of large department stores, other prominent business men and community organizers were among those who attended.

At the same time between 40 and 50 children who won honors in city-wide contests during the homecoming week, were awarded their prizes. Miss Dorothy Chrypool, 15 years old, 7905 Luella avenue, and Abel Berland, 19 years old, 4702 North Drake avenue, who were chosen as ideal junior citizens of Chicago, sat as guests of honor at the speakers' table. Mayor Kelly complimented each.

Carpenters Reject 4 Day Week Offer of Builders

Rejecting the compromise offer of the Builders' association, the Carpenters District council yesterday ordered its business agents to sign up contracts with individual builders for a six hour day with a five day week. The council, whose contract with the contractors' body ran out last May, had authorized by referendum a strike of its 18,000 members. The builders then offered a thirty hour week, with three days of eight hours, and one of six hours. Leaders do not expect a strike, at least immediately.

MRS. BELMONT SEES SUCCESS IN FUND DRIVE HERE

New York Leader Praises Chicago's Fine Spirit.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Because she sees Chicago as "the most generous, most cordial, and friendliest city in the United States," Mrs. August Belmont of New York, who for three years headed the woman's division of the community fund there, predicted yesterday complete success for Chicago's $3,000,000 community fund campaign. She addressed a group of a hundred women, civic and social leaders, who were guests of Mrs. Joseph Cudahy at luncheon in the Casino club.

In the spectacular achievements of A Century of Progress, Mrs. Belmont declared, she found the outstanding feature to be the character and courage demonstrated by Chicagoans in putting it through despite "every known difficulty and discouragement." The same qualities, she added, insure attainment of the community fund quota.

Sees No Ground for Doubt.

"To me," she said, "the World's Fair, with all its marvels, never adequately described by those who came to Chicago and returned to tell us about them, is a symbol of the spirit of the city. If we go into this drive with the same courage and confidence there is no question about the outcome.

"I cannot see why there should be a doubt in any one's mind that we should continue these drives regardless of governmental activities.

"I feel about the women of my own city and of Chicago, that they have shouldered these responsibilities in a worthy manner, and that the good will that comes out to the people who need relief contributes the same spirit in a large community that one finds in a smaller town.

Red Cross Specially Indorsed.

"I feel that we are going to pull our country out of a desperate situation in which she finds herself, and you have my congratulations and my best wishes in your efforts."

Special indorsement of the Red Cross as one of the 130 welfare agencies to be benefited in the community fund followed the luncheon, since both Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. Cudahy are members of the board of incorporators which obtained its charter from congress.

Mrs. Irene Sidley of the volunteer service committee of the Chicago chapter explained that no large gifts from important corporations will be solicited by the Red Cross this fall because of the participation in the drive, but that the usual roll call for members will be conducted from Armistice day to Thanksgiving. This procedure is necessary to provide the remainder of the $200,000 annual budget, since the maximum amount allowed from the community fund will be $125,000.

BRONCHIAL TROUBLES

EX-PROSECUTOR IS SUBPENAED IN ZUKOR GEM CASE

Ruvell's Negotiations to Return Jewels Told.

Attorney Nat Ruvell, former assistant state's attorney in the régime of John A. Swanson, was disclosed yesterday as the man who negotiated for the return of the $62,500 worth of jewelry stolen from Mrs. Lottie Zukor, wife of Adolph Zukor, motion picture executive. It was through the negotiations Attorney Ruvell conducted with another attorney, whose name was not disclosed in court, that the burglary, which occurred in Mrs. Zukor's suite in the Blackstone hotel after midnight of June 13, was solved.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, who is in charge of the prosecution, related these facts yesterday afternoon in his opening statement to the jury hearing the case in Judge Cornelius Harrington's Criminal court, where two men and their wives are on trial charged either with entering Mrs. Zukor's apartment and stealing the gems or with receiving the stolen property. The defendants are James Weinberg and his wife, Eula, and Robert Vestal and his wife, Helen.

Tells of Negotiations.

Attorney Ruvell, who has been subpenaed as a state witness, said after court was adjourned for the day that he negotiated for the return of the jewelry with Attorney Francis Healy, counsel for the Chicago Jewelers association. The latter then got in touch with insurance company representatives, who agreed to pay a reward for the return of the jewels. Ruvell said he did not think he was doing anything wrong, but he said "I may have used poor judgment, now that I look back."

In his outline of the evidence Prosecutor Dougherty said he would show that Mrs. Weinberg was the actual thief. The day after the jewels were stolen, he said, Mrs. Weinberg showed them to the Vestals.

He then told how the Vestals, acting on Mrs. Weinberg's instructions, are alleged to have put the jewelry in a safety deposit vault. Then about July 1 Weinberg telephoned Attorney Ruvell and told him that he had possession of the Zukor jewels, Dougherty told the jury. The prosecutor said that the police had tapped the telephone wires, but an objection from Attorney Burke was sustained and he was not allowed to give at this time details of conversations heard over these wires.

First Story of Crime Solution.

It was disclosed that Weinberg's telephone wires had been tapped by Clarence Converse, government agent, who at the time was conducting an investigation of the $250,000 mail robbery in which the late Edgar Lebensberger was indicted. When Ruvell notified him over the telephone that the reward would be paid, Weinberg brought the jewels to the attorney's office, and then waited in the lobby of the building.

In response to a telephone call, Attorney Healy and the insurance representative joined Ruvell. Converse, who had overheard the conversation, then appeared, and the three men accompanied him, at his request, to a hotel where the affair was explained. Weinberg was later arrested.

At the time the Zukor jewelry was recovered the police announced that it was found in the flat jointly occupied by the Weinbergs and Vestals. The opening statement of the prosecutor yesterday was the first intimation of how the crime was solved.

Mrs. Zukor will be the first witness when the trial is resumed this morning.

Bobby Edwards Faces Jury in 'Tragedy' Murder Case

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Judge W. A. Valentine rapped sharply with a gavel at 10 a. m. today in the Luzerne county courthouse and the clerk of the court cried out: "The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania versus Robert Allan Edwards."

The trial of Pennsylvania's most recent murder case had begun.

The defendant, Bobby Edwards, 23 year old mine surveyor charged with the murder of Freda McKechnie, his neighborhood sweetheart, was seated with his attorneys, facing the court. He was calm; his face betrayed no emotion. His keen gaze was leveled straight ahead; his hands were folded in his lap.

Young Edwards was dressed in a freshly pressed serge suit and wore a blue tie, white shirt, and black shoes. His black hair was sleeked down.

Attorney Reads Indictment.

Assistant District Attorney J. Harold Flannery arose, rattling a paper. Edwards, still staring straight ahead, arose with his attorneys as Mr. Flannery began to read in a loud voice the indictment on which the commonwealth is basing its demand for the death penalty for the defendant, the indictment charging that Edwards murdered his sweetheart, Miss McKechnie, a young church worker, who was facing the prospect of motherhood, so that he could continue his romance with the "other girl in the case," Miss Margaret Crain, 23 years old, a music teacher, of East Aurora, N. Y.

It is charged that Edwards struck her on the head with a blackjack and drowned her in Harvey's lake, a resort eighteen miles from here, on the night of July 30.

Edwards maintained his calm throughout the reading of the indictment, his dark eyes trained on the assistant district attorney. When the latter had finished Edwards sat down and clasped his hands on the desk in front of him.

His father, Daniel Edwards, a devout church worker, was seated just inside the court railing, a few feet to the rear of his son. He is a middle-aged man with a black mustache, spectacles, and dark hair flecked with gray. He said not a word to his son as the trial got under way.

Roll of Panel Called.

With the reading of the indictment over, the tedious process of selecting a jury was begun. The clerk called the roll of the panel of 80 from which the jury is to be chosen. The courtroom, which will seat not more than 200 persons, was filled with the members of the panel, newspaper writers, and court officials.

The jury was completed at a night session and taking testimony will begin tomorrow. On the panel are five laborers, two engineers, a trainman, watchman, miner, surveyor, and a gardener.

Assistant District Attorney J. H. Flannery in his opening statement demanded the death penalty.

Outside, blue-coated policemen, wearing helmets like those of the London bobbies, were trying to cope with a crowd of 500 persons who jammed the corridors on the first, second, and third floors of the building, unable to crowd into the small courtroom.

Court attachés reported that substantial sums of money have been offered for the precious admittance cards.

Edwards is a member of a respected church-going family. In the ordinary course of events such a case would attract little or no interest outside the boy's own community. The crime of which he is accused is in itself not unusual, but the circumstances surrounding it are.

Thus Edwards, an average small-town boy of whom the world had never heard until a few months ago, today finds himself the central figure in a real life drama that has aroused nation-wide attention.

"THE LOVE BIRD MURDERS" BALK MAN MADE LAW

Punch and Jill, Slayers, Are Happy Now.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Two parrakeets have perpetrated a crime here, but seem likely "to live happily ever after," as the old storybooks used to say. Their deeds might be called "The Love Bird Murders."

Mrs. Samuel Lewis Shank, widow of a former Indianapolis mayor, had two pairs of love birds. Punch and Judy were cage neighbors of Jack and Jill. Each pair seemed happy—as love birds.

Recently a shaft of sunlight shot through a doorway. Mrs. Shank set the two cages side by side on the floor. Punch saw Jill in a new light. Jill was not indifferent.

The Triangle Is Started.

Thereafter Punch would crowd over on his perch to the bars of his cage. Jill came as close to him as she could. Their mates sat forsaken in opposite ends of the cages.

Then one day Punch escaped from his cage. He flew out of the window and was gone all night. Next morning he flew in a door and back into his cage.

After that he paid even less attention to Judy. Jill's plumage was blue; Judy's, to which he was accustomed, was green like his own. Perhaps Judy did not understand him.

And Judy Is Found Dead.

Mrs. Shank was accustomed to covering the cages at night. A morning or two later when Mrs. Shank lifted the cover from the cage there lay little Judy dead, her green feathers rumpled, bloodstained, her throat cut.

Still later, in the same way, it was found that Jill had killed Jack.

There seemed no law under which Mrs. Shank could inflict punishment. If separated the birds might die. So Mrs. Shank put Punch and Jill into one cage and blue love bird and green love bird appear to be congenial and happy.

Indian Shows Ore Samples; Starts Ontario Gold Rush

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Samples of gold ore brought in by Paul Mitchell, an Indian, were credited today with starting a new northland gold rush to the western side of Lake Nipigon, opposite the new Sturgeon river field. The territory is about sixty-five miles due north of Port Arthur, without roads of any kind. All available airplanes have been commandeered for a dash to the new area. Many prospectors also plan to go by boat across Lake Nipigon.

KILLED IN BREAD MIXER.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Caught in a bread mixer at the Bartes and Trade establishment this afternoon, Charles Counterman, 19, was killed.

KINGSFORD-SMITH FIGHTS TO REACH BRITISH AIR RACE

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian airman, was fighting against time today to reach England by Oct. 14, the latest date on which competitors in the London to Melbourne air race may report for the start.

SIR CHARLES KINGSFORD-SMITH.

The noted airman flew 1,000 miles to Cloncurry Sunday, and was mystified to find the engine cowling split in several places, forcing him to return to Sydney for repairs.

He hoped to make a fresh start tomorrow or Wednesday, allowing 12 or 13 days to accomplish the flight to England. Sir Charles has previously flown from England to Australia in less than that time.

AUSTRIAN CHIEF SAVES NAZI FROM DEATH SENTENCE

Rewarded for Rescue of Forty Alpinists.

LEOBEN, Austria, Oct. 1.—(AP)—President Wilhelm Miklas commuted the death sentence passed upon an Austrian Nazi today because he was a mountain guide who had saved the lives of forty mountain climbers in distress.

The Nazi, Peter Pfister, was sentenced at a court martial for participating in the July insurrection in which Chancellor Dollfuss was slain.

Learning that the man had been awarded a silver medal by the government in 1928 for heroism, the president commuted the penalty to fifteen years.

A Von Papen Mystery.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Franz von Papen, Germany's minister to Austria, disappeared today into the woods of the government - owned Bakony forests, far removed from Budapest, where he is conferring with Hungarian political leaders, including Count Stefan Bethlen.

Saturday he held conferences in Budapest with Premier Julius Goemboes and others. There has been much speculation regarding the mission here of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, vice chancellor of Austria, who, it was assumed, is discussing Austro-German relations with Von Papen.

Has Not Shot a Deer.

Hungarian newspapers say Von Papen has not shot a single deer on his hunting expedition, leading to the expressed belief the mission is wholly political.

Austrian newspapers have been wondering when the former German vice chancellor would arrive in Vienna to take over his new duties.

LEADERS OF PAGAN MOVEMENT SEEK GERMAN RECRUITS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—"Christianity is only an episode in German history. We must have the courage to initiate a new episode if we desire to establish ourselves on the present."

Wilhelm Hauer, leader of the anti-Christian German Faith movement, made this statement here today at a congress of officials of the movement. The congress was called with the aim of expanding the movement. Hauer said it is an error to believe that salvation must be found in accordance with the words of Jesus: "I am the way, the truth and the life: No man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

He declared the German faith movement "fights against the teaching that there is only one path for all." He was applauded when he advocated the introduction of the old Nordic Eddas and sagas into the curriculum of German schools.

COLORADO EX-CONVICT IS QUESTIONED ABOUT MILLINER'S SLAYING

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Charles W. Neal, 43, former Colorado prison inmate, was questioned today in the investigation into the slaying of Miss Ida S. Hanson, 55, a milliner.

CHARLES W. NEAL.

He was arrested Saturday at Spencer, Ia., on a technical charge of parole violation, and is believed to be the last known person to see Miss Hanson alive. According to his story, he had a $10,000 business deal with her in May, 1933, the month police say she was killed.

Her body was found in June, 1933, near Cripple Crook, Colo. It lay by a road which led to a spot where Neal once allegedly operated a still. The body was not identified until a short time ago, however.

Despite questioning of two Colorado officers and Omaha policemen, Neal stood firm in his denials that he knew anything of the woman's death. He maintained he was in Chicago on May 16, 1933, the day on which officers said Miss Hanson was slain.

DR. GLEITSMANN GETS 1-14 YEARS IN GIRL'S DEATH

CRIMINAL COURT.

Frank Gorgolinski, Walter Ligenza, Andrew Mroczka, Max Strociak, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 20 years each in the penitentiary; Peter Suwansky, receiving stolen property, sentence dto 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Dr. Emil Gleitsmann, 68 years old, of 3940 North Monticello avenue, was sentenced to a term of one to 14 years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Walter P. Steffen in the Criminal court as the result of his conviction last week on the charge of manslaughter by abortion. The judge overruled a motion for a new trial.

The charge against Dr. Gleitsmann, who is half blind and feeble, arose from the death of Miss Mary Colbert, 23 years old, 854 North St. Louis avenue, on March 5, 1933, as the result of an illegal operation.

This was the doctor's third conviction on the charge. Found guilty in October, 1933, and again last March, Gleitsmann won new trials both times.

According to Assistant State's Attorney Emmett Moynihan, the state has two other charges of murder by abortion against Dr. Gleitsmann which are held in abeyance. If this case is appealed, the state will move to prosecute on the other counts, Moynihan said.

DIES AS RESULT OF FALL.

Martin Linkowski, 78 years old, 2322 North Hamilton avenue, a retired watchman, died at his home yesterday as the result of a broken hip incurred when he fell in his home on Aug. 5.

FOREIGN WRITERS PROTEST AGAINST SLANDER BY NAZIS

Ask Goebbels to Protect Journalists.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—An energetic protest against the campaign of slander of foreign journalists in Germany was submitted by the Foreign Press association in Berlin to Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, today. The association declared:

"We turn to you, asking you to take the necessary steps in our mutual interests to protect foreign journalists henceforth against slanders and chicane, as we are convinced that these happenings are unknown to you."

Attacked Over Radio.

Goebbels controls Germany's radio system, and the association pointed out that during a recent broadcast of a Saar demonstration at Ehrenbreitstein the announcer proclaimed: "There sit the foreigners who will doubtless be deeply impressed. But then they will go and lie in their newspapers."

"For some time there has been evidence of systematic action against foreign journalists residing here," said the association's protest. "Foreign journalists of distinction, both women and men, who for years within the limits of their own national possibilities reported on Germany with good will, hear their profession attacked at gatherings to which they have been invited. Moreover, the residences of members were recently searched disgracefully by the GSP [German secret police]. The fruitlessness of the searches does not alter the fact that the victims were disillusioned, if not embittered."

Message Distorted.

Mario da Silva, Berlin correspondent of Il Lavoro Fascista of Rome, describes in detail how a message he had filed was sent back from Rome by the official German news agency. His dispatch was distorted to suggest that he had slandered the German people. Although Silva gave the correct version to the German foreign office, this was not circulated.

Der Angriff, Goebbels' official organ, used the distorted message as the basis for an attack against the Italian press and then refused to publish a correction.

Estimate County Towns' Registration at 60,000

Daniel A. Carey, chief of the election division of the county clerk's office, estimated yesterday that the registration of voters in the Cook county towns last Saturday totaled about 60,000. The final figure will not be ready until today. There will be another registration one week from today, and Carey predicted the final total for the suburbs under the county clerk would be between 195,000 and 200,000.

FREE CHICAGOAN IN MISSOURI PRISON BY MISTAKE AS SLAYER

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Louis De More, 43 years old, former Chicago taxicab driver, was released tonight from Missouri penitentiary after he convinced Gov. Guy B. Park that he did not commit the crime for which he had served five months of a life term. De More said he plans to give up big city life for the quietude of an Illinois farm.

LOUIS DE MORE.

For years De More operated a cab in Chicago. When business fell off, he wandered to St. Louis, where in April he was arrested as a suspect in the fatal shooting of Policeman Albert Siko in a street car holdup.

De More pleaded guilty, explaining after that he believed he would be hanged if he went to trial and was convicted.

The arrest a few weeks ago of George Couch, former Indiana convict, against whom the St. Louis police now believe they have "a strong case" in the Siko slaying, paved the way for De More's freedom.

EVANSTON ACTS TO STILL NOISES OF EARLY MORN

Evanstonians love a peaceful slumber, particularly in early morning hours when milk wagons rumble through the quiet streets and horses' hoofs strike stridently on brick pavements. If the city fathers have anything to say about it, and it looks as if they had, such disturbers of the commuters' sleep will be relegated to the past.

At a meeting of the city council last night the question of preparing an ordinance requiring milk companies to equip their horses with rubber shoes and their wagons with rubber tires was referred to the judiciary committee. Mayor Charles H. Bartlett suggested that the entire matter of useless noises, such as the tooting of horns, be taken up by the committee. No one mentioned the crowing of cocks since the suburb's last large chicken yard disappeared several years ago.

Evanston has also decided to motorize its city service completely. Advertisment of bids for three dump trucks, two tractors, and two snowplow blades was authorized, thus eliminating the need for twelve horses still used in hauling service trucks. Six of the horses are 20 years old.

Market Proprietor Shot by Three Robbers Dies

Harry Marcowitz, 35 years old, 3549 Dickens avenue, died in the Luther Memorial hospital yesterday of bullet wounds inflicted by one of three robbers he fought near his home on Saturday after the men had robbed him of $300, the week-end receipts of Marcowitz's grocery.

PATMAN TELLS PLAN TO PUSH VETS' PAYMENTS

Describes Bill to Provide Federal Notes.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 1.—(AP)—From cheering an appeal by President Roosevelt that they coöperate to end economic distress the Veterans of Foreign Wars today turned to applaud the demand of Representative Wright Patman of Texas for payment of the bonus and to welcome distinguished visitors to their convention here today.

Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler and Representative Jennings Randolph of West Virginia were among the guests.

The President's appeal was in a message read before the opening business session of the convention here, in which he expressed his regret that he could not attend.

Demands Immediate Payment.

Representative Patman demanded immediate payment of the adjusted service compensation certificates, claiming that the increase in purchasing power would act as a powerful stimulant of prosperity.

Patman said he already has pending another bill for payment of the $2,200,000,000 to the veterans in legal tender United States notes. This, he said, could be done without increasing the national debt, taxes, or interest, and would give the nation $112,000,000 now set aside to retire the certificates in 1942.

He criticized the federal reserve banks as "a double barreled compound racket" and said every official of every reserve bank in the country "should be fired immediately."

Echoes Patman's Call.

Commander J. E. Van Zandt echoed Patman's call for bonus payment and urged federalization of all material plants and a uniform pension system. Many of the delegates here said they expect Van Zandt to win reëlection for another year. Edward Seacord of San Jose, Cal., and Junior Vice Commander C. R. Christie of Seattle are out for the job of Fred T. Windsor of St. Joseph, Mo., national senior vice commander.

FORTUNE TELLER GETS 15 DAYS FOR EFFECT ON LUCK

"Miss Tanis started to tell my fortune," Attorney Fitzpatrick explained to Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in the Felony court yesterday. "She frisked me just like a policeman does searching a prisoner for weapons. I was amazed at her mind reading ability when she laughingly told me that I was thinking she was going to steal my watch. Outside the booth I remembered my money, found it was missing, and had the fortune teller arrested."

Miss Tanis, who is really Mrs. Mary Evans and the mother of four children despite the fact she is only 25 years old, pleaded guilty of petit larceny and was sentenced to 15 days in the county jail.

JULIUS L. MARKS FACES COURT ON ALIMONY CHARGE

Julius L. Marks, who has been the subject of a federal grand jury investigation following the bankruptcy of the investment securities concern which bore his name, appeared yesterday in the court of Superior Judge Rudolph F. DeSort on a contempt citation filed by his former wife, Mrs. Bernice Marks, 6849 Ridgeland avenue. Mrs. Marks charged that her former husband had failed to keep up alimony payments and support instalments for herself and their daughter, Evelyn, 15 years old, and now is $900 in arrears.

Mrs. Mark's attorney, Norman Becker, called Evelyn to the witness stand and she testified her father still was employing a cook, a maid and a chauffeur at his home, 7737 Eastlake terrace. Judge DeSort then increased the alimony and support order from $45 to $55 a week. He directed Marks to appear on Oct. 8, to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court.

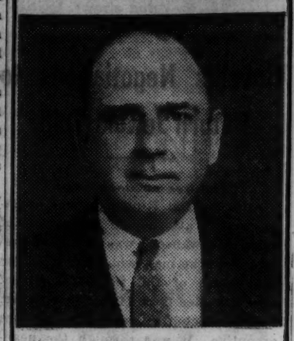
A TRUE STORY



By A PHILADELPHIAN

"MANY times," writes Howard J. Crawford, 3401 Wallace Street, West Philadelphia, Penna., "I have been prompted to write about my experience with Nujol, in the hope that your advertising stressing its help might reach the large numbers of people suffering from hemorrhoids.

"For years I had suffered with the unending agony of hemorrhoids, buying all kinds of salves, pills and ointment. Two physicians had advised a surgical operation, but partly in fear and partly due to the cost I continued on as before.

"One day, in discouragement, I purchased a pint bottle of Nujol. I began taking a tablespoonful each night at bedtime and I was grateful a few days later to experience a restfulness and peace I had not known for a long time. This one bottle was my cue. If one bottle helped a little, the large can would be better. I continued without interruption taking one tablespoonful each night until the can was empty. What a change it made in me. In six months' time I felt strong, and while I don't mean to say any magic was employed, I have had no suggestion of pain or disturbance since. It has been past two years, now, and I discontinued the treatment, but I know positively that it was Nujol that did the work.

"Any poor devil who has this affliction should give Nujol a six months' faithful test and he will wonder why he endured such agonizing distress with such a simple economical remedy obtainable anywhere.

"This letter is sent you with the hope some other suffering human may learn of the good Nujol will do in similar circumstances."

Nujol, "regular as clockwork" now comes in two forms, plain Nujol and Cream of Nujol, the latter flavored and often preferred by children. You can get it at any drug store.

What is your Nujol story? If you have been using Nujol for ten years or more, if you are bringing up your children on it, tell us. Address Stanco Incorporated, 2 Park Avenue, Dept. 23-R, New York City.

[OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1932]

CLAUDETTE COLBERT in Cecil B. De Mille's "CLEOPATRA" a Paramount Picture

Dear Miss Colbert:—

Old Gold's story is indeed an important story for women. But we cannot tell it nearly so well as Old Gold tells it for itself!

The woman who smokes Old Gold experiences for herself the coolness, the smoothness, the friendly throat-ease of this truly different cigarette. She discovers, too, that in its freedom from oily, artificial flavoring, Old Gold is a cleaner, as well as a smoother, smoke . . . leaving no objectionable odor in fabrics or on the breath.

We repeat, Old Gold's story is indeed an important story for women. But we cannot tell it nearly so well as Old Gold tells it for itself!

Sincerely,

SPANISH CABINET OUT; REPUBLIC'S FATE IS AT STAKE

Ministry Forced to Quit by Monarchists.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Oct. 1.—After five months of vain attempts to please the monarchists and yet avoid a Republican rebellion, the friendless government of Premier Ricardo Samper resigned tonight.

RICARDO SAMPER.

The clerical reactionaries, who dominate parliament, expressed displeasure with Samper when the chamber of deputies opened today after the summer recess. The result was that Samper and his ministers went meekly to the former royal palace and presented their resignations to President Alcala Zamora, thus bringing that wearied executive face to face with the gravest crisis known in his three years in the presidency.

That the very existence of the republic is at stake seems to be taken for granted in Madrid tonight. Politicians agree with the president that there are only three alternatives that of which is free from danger.

Premier Severly Critized.

Samper, presiding over a minority cabinet completely dependent for its existence on the Catholic forces under Jose Marie Gil Robles, resigned when the young conservative leader condemned the premier's failure to use the mailed fist on the autonomous Catalans and the Basques, and asked for a strong government in which his party would hold the strategic ministries.

President Zamora could call somebody to form such a ministry, but that would mean an immediate revolution, if the warnings of the Socialists and even the Conservative Republicans mean anything. They contend that Gil Robles is a kind of Spanish Engelbert Dollfuss, determined to strangle the republic.

Zamora's second alternative is to call an "authentic" Republican leader dissolve this reactionary parliament and call new elections. But he cannot be sure the right will not counter with a military uprising.

Expressions of fear of an armed rebellion were splashed throughout the country's press tonight. The newspaper Heraldo de Madrid says that army officers are preparing a coup d'etat, but have failed so far to win support of the powerful civil guard.

Guard President's Palace.

An indication that the first attempt by either right or left revolutionaries is expected to be aimed at the head of the state was seen when President Zamora's ornamental palace guard appeared tonight loaded down with rifles and cartridge belts.

Hundreds of police armed with rifles surrounded the parliament building when the session opened. Spectators and journalists were searched for weapons. Speaker Santiago Alba declared he would allow the deputies, a majority of whom go armed, to be searched. But he asked the party chiefs to instruct the deputies to check their weapons in the cloakroom.

Samper, who was recruited from anonymity to preside over the cabinet, fell in tragi-comic circumstances. After Gil Robles accused him of allowing the authority of the central government to be usurped by the Catalans and Basques, Samper pathetically appealed for the support of his own party, but not one voice was raised in his behalf. The right booed and the left laughed until José Maria Cid, the agrarian minister of communications, stalked out. Samper followed suit without a vote being taken.

Picks New Rumanian Cabinet.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Premier George Tatarescu, his old cabinet out, tonight was almost ready to submit his new list of ministers to King Carol.

The Tatarescu cabinet resigned today as the result of differences among themselves, and the king, now at his country residence at Sinai, immediately encharged Tatarescu with the task of forming another government.

JAP DEMAND FOR 3,000 AIRPLANES STARTLES NATION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Oct. 1.—Minister of War Gen. Senjuro Hayashi today distributed 160,000 copies of a sensational pamphlet warning the nation of the danger of a foreign war. The pamphlet begins: "War is the father of creation, the mother of civilization," and urges a tremendous increase in war planes, thus to enable Japan to meet an attack from 6,500 enemy planes.

This figure he computes by including 3,000 planes each of the United States and soviet Russia and 500 for China, which he declares must all be considered potential enemy planes.

He points out that Japan has only 1,000 planes, and must increase this to 3,000.

Shocks Political Circles.

Political and government circles are frankly shocked at the army pamphlet. The government was taken aback at the abrupt publication and at a loss to understand why the war office found it necessary to issue the pamphlet at this time. It is understood the matter will be brought up at a special session of the diet in November.

Taking up domestic matters, the pamphlet urges national socialism and points out that farmers are groaning under unprecedented burdens.

"It is intolerable from a national viewpoint that a certain section of the nation should be allowed to take the lion's share of economic profits, thereby placing the majority in dire straits."

Civilian quarters wondered whether the army is seeking to establish a Fascist régime. It was pointed out that some of the proposals of the pamphlet strike at the roots of the existing economic system. The publication coincides with the preparation of the 1935-'36 national budget and the army obviously desires to gain public support for demands for huge army and navy appropriations.

Refers to U. S. Negroes.

Besides dealing with Japanese problems, the pamphlet takes an odd turn in asserting the United States has 12,000,000 Negroes who are a permanent agony to her. This, it says, combined with the fact that the United States is constituted of peoples of many countries, has resulted in the bad elements harassing her just as the Jews have harassed Germany.

"How Germany has been troubled by the nonassimilable Jew can easily be inferred from the drastic policy which Chancellor Adolf Hitler adopted, while America's 12,000,000 Negroes will ever antagonize the United States."

Continuing on the question of race and population, the pamphlet asserts that Japan has a far greater advantage than the others, adding that the soviet union is composed of 180 peoples, with consequent friction.

The army increasingly feels the weakness of its armaments as the result of strengthening of the soviet military, and the fact that Japan now has the responsibility of defending a territory three times the size of the empire, meaning Manchukuo, it is pointed out.

As a result of the five year plan, the soviet now posseses the greatest military force in the world and is steadily increasing its strength in the far east, and its challenging attitude may be seen in the steadily increasing number of border disputes, the statement says.

"This incredible behavior can only be regarded as a direct challenge to Japan. We cannot forecast what will be the outcome, and must prepare for this emergency."

Goods Rejected.

Speaking of the international situation the war minister "regrets" to note that Japanese merchandise is rejected everywhere in the world, while diplomatically the country is being gradually isolated.

Regarding naval disarmament, the pamphlet declares that Japan, at whatever cost, must oppose the existing ratios and acquire equality. The acceptance of an unequal ratio is utterly intolerable, it maintains. Seeing the possibility of the naval conference breaking up, the publication declares that the rupture is leading to a crisis that may determine the fate of the empire.

Alleging the American intentions to possess a stronger fleet than Japan, the pamphlet cites the late Admiral Edward W. Eberle's statement that a "defensive navy is sufficient to hold up the Monroe doctrine, but to uphold the open door policy of equal opportunity in China the United States must possess an offensive navy."

It adds that the American plan to build a stronger navy than Japan was designed merely to carry out the latter policy.

Referring to China, the pamphlet notes with satisfaction that Chinese politicians have apparently ceased to depend on the league of nations to hold Japan in check and is coming to realise the need of coöperation.

GOLD MINERS SEEK MORE PAY; THREATEN STRIKE

Jackson, Cal., Oct. 1.—(AP)—A strike of gold miners—something new in California's Mother Lode country—today threatened to halt production in Admador county.

By a vote of 137 to 35 Mother Lode local No. 48, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter workers, called for a walkout unless their demands are met. The strike would affect about 400 workers in four mines, union officials said.

Operators of the Argonaut mine posted "shutdown" notices and officials of the Kennedy mine intimated they planned similar action.

The miners demand increased pay, in view of the advance in the price of gold from $20.67 an ounce to $35 an ounce, and for union recognition.

Machine Gunners Attack Bus Station Near Havana

HAVANA, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Machine gun bullets fired from an automobile, riddled a bus station in suburban Marianao tonight as a strike tied up a few transportation lines. A general strike called by the national labor confederation failed to materialize and the government took drastic measures to put down what it termed a "revolutionary" movement.

KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Emil Strunk, 19, grocery clerk, is dead and three other young people are seriously injured as the result of an automobile accident, Strunk, driver of the car, failed to negotiate a curve and lost control of the car.

CUT NEW YORK VALUATION FOR TAXATION BASIS

New York, Oct. 1.—[Special.]—The assessed valuation of taxable New York City real estate has been tentatively fixed for 1935 at $16,008,013,146, or $454,157,622 below this year's final figures, according to a schedule announced today by William Stanley Miller, the acting president of the department of taxes and assessments.

Unofficial estimates put the 1935 basic tax rate at $2.72 per $100 of assessed valuation, according to the announced schedule. This would represent a rise of 18 points over this year.

Under the bankers loan agreement only 450 million dollars of the city's budget can be raised by real estate taxes. This leaves the fusion administration the problem of obtaining some $46,000,000 from other tax sources in order to balance the 1935 budget under present estimates.

The 1935 valuation is $4,264,032,548 below the 1928 figure.

Since then the reductions have been at the rate of approximately a billion dollars a year until the 1935 schedule was made up.

New York Edison Power plant—$32,380,000.

Empire State building—$30,000,000.

Rockefeller Center—$25,000,000.

Equitable building—$29,000,000.

Central Telephone Exchange—$22,200,000.

New York Life Insurance company building—$19,500,000.

New York Stock Exchange—$19,600,000.

EXPECT DECISION ON PARKS TODAY; RUSH PAY PLANS

Unified Control System Is Being Completed.

Chicago park district officials last night were putting final touches to a new municipal code for the park system and preparing for payment of $1,200,000 in back salaries to 3,000 park workers as they awaited a final ruling by the Illinois Supreme court on the park consolidation case expected soon after the court convenes today.

The court's denial of a petition for a rehearing of the park case will set in motion machinery for the payment of back salaries, said Robert J. Dunham, president of the park district board.

Small Parks Delay Plan.

The Supreme court last August upheld the validity of the act merging the 22 Chicago park units into a central district, and shortly following that time Mr. Dunham began negotiations for the sale of 1934 tax anticipation warants to obtain funds for salaries. On Sept. 15, however, Floyd E. Thompson, attorney for small parks fighting the merger, sought to file a petition for a rehearing of the case.

This action halted possible pay disbursement and also delayed the transfer of properties from the small park units to the Chicago park district.

While the park officials are unable to comment on possible action by the Supreme court, it is known that they expect a favorable decision, since the justices unanimously concurred in the opinion upholding the park act.

Writing New Code.

The board yesterday was writing the final chapters of the new municipal code, which will supersede the varied rules, regulations and ordinances of the old park districts.

"The new code does not contemplate radical changes in park administration," said James Slattery, park district attorney, who is directing the work. "It will, however, centralize park control and it will unify and simplify existing law.

"The code outlines a departmental organization of the parks. This means that responsibility will be centralized in each department, and there will be no overlapping of budgets and duties. For example, it sets up an accounting department for the entire park system.

Will Serve Entire System.

"This department, already moving to the west park administration building in Garfield park, will function for the entire system and will eliminate haphazard budgeting and financing.

"The trafic code will mean unified laws for all of the parks. There are no drastic changes here, but there is unity, and that is the chief thing needed. In the same way license and permit regulations will be the same for all of the parks."

In an effort to complete the new municipal code in time to place it in effect immediately if the court should deny the rehearing request, the park commissioners worked steadily through the week-end and continued late yesterday. The code should be finished by Thursday, Mr. Slattery said.

NURSE CHARGED WITH MURDER OF DETECTIVE

Miss Bernadine Dunning, 26 years old, a nurse, was named in a warant issued by Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in the Felony court yesterday charging her with the murder of Detective Sergeant Louis Kolb during a tryst in a parked automobile early Friday. Judge Hartigan put the case over to Oct. 8 pending a coroner's verdict.

Because of the issuance of the formal charge a hearing scheduled before Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court later in the day for a writ of habeas corpus was dismissed. Miss Dunning remained in the county jail.

At the arraignment yesterday morning, Miss Dunning appeared in a black silk dress and maintained the composure she has displayed heretofore in the case. Assistant State's Attorney John Boyle suggested the continuance amid a burst of photographer's flashlights. Defense Attorneys Harold Levy and Emmett Byrne told the court they were ready for the hearing then, but the judge ordered the postponement.

Defense has indicated it will attempt to prove the nurse shot Kolb in defense of her honor.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—The Koesen corps—the central organization of dueling corps in German universities—protested today against the order compelling students to live for a year in "comradeship houses."

"This order destroys the healthiest and oldest part of student self-administration and replaces it by a formal burocracy," the protest says. "Under this order students do not see any possibility to live, but, at best, to vegetate under the destruction of their right to demonstrate their Nazi will through achievements."

MUSSOLINI SEEKS TO CHEER UP ITALY'S WORKERS

Plans Barnstorming Trip in North.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Oct. 1.—Premier Mussolini will go barnstorming in northern Italy for ten days, beginning Thursday at Milan.

Faced with an increasingly acute economic situation arising from his inability to balance the budget, depletion of the gold reserve, and shrunken exports, Il Duce will invade Italy's industrial stronghold with the hope of bolstering faith in his economic medicine.

To Cover Economic Triangle.

His ten day campaign will cover what is known as Italy's economic triangle, that is, the three chief banking, manufacturing, and commercial cities, Milan, Turin, and Genoa. Mussolini also will take in several towns famous in the military campaigns of Napoleon, such as Cremona and Novara.

The dictator's intention to have this trip serve to bolster the faith of the industrial and agricultural workers seems to be indicated by the announcement he will take part in several demonstrations organized among rural workers the first day of his Milan visit, while on the second day he will devote his attention to demonstrative appeals to industrial workers and visits to factories.

Il Duce's visit is being carefully planned. Fascist advance agents and impresarios are setting the stage. The crowning spectacle of this northern campaign, which follows three weeks on the heels of the Il Duce's invasion of Puglia and Bari and southern Italy, will be a speech at the Milan public square on Saturday afternoon.

Drum Up Enthusiasm.

In this square arches of triumph and reviewing stands have been erected. Count Galeazzo Ciano, undersecretary of state for press and propaganda, Mussolini's son-in-law, and his Fascist press orchestra tonight began to tune up the trombones to drum up enthusiasm for Mussolini's trip.

Il Duce will arrive at Milan Thursday morning to review a parade of farmers. He then will visit several neighboring towns to inspect Fascist institutions. On Friday he will call at Milanese factories to make short speeches to the workingmen, and probably stage impromptu stunts.

From Milan he will go to Cremona, Novara, Turin, and Genoa, returning home around Oct. 10 with, as he hopes, a big wave of popular enthusiasm to serve as a background for his talks with Louis Barthou, foreign minister of France, which will follow shortly afterward.

NEW DEALERS USE ARMY'S PLANES MORE THAN ARMY

Navy Hard Pressed, Too, for Craft to Fly.

BY CHESLY MANLY.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—So many congressmen, members of the cabinet, the brain trust and other New Dealers were riding free in army and navy planes, at the expense of the tax payers, in the early months of the Roosevelt administration that there was a shortage of planes.

The army and navy not only were lacking in the ships necessary to carry on the normal activities at Bolling and Anacostia fields, but they found it difficult to provide enough planes for the New Dealers on their speech making and inspection tours.

Any government official and even private citizens, with the approval of the secretary of war or the secretary of the navy, could take a free ride in a service plane. Most to avail themselves of this privilege were the heads of the so-called recovery, or alphabetical agencies, first and foremost being Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

Orders Use Limited.

Something had to be done, so Secretary of War George H. Dern and Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson conferred with President Roosevelt, who, on Oct. 2, 1933, issued an executive order limiting the use of service planes to members of the cabinet, of which there are ten, the director of the budget and the heads of the RFC, the FCA, the HOLC, the NRA, the AAA, the FERA, the CCC and the PWA.

The executive order split up these functionaries of the New Deal and apportioned them about equally to the army and navy, so that whenever they want a free ride they know which branch of the service to call upon. An amusing commentary upon the operation of burocracy is that Honest Harold Ickes is divided in half. When he goes in his capacity as secretary of the interior he must take an army plane, but if he essays the rôle of public works administrator the navy must carry him. It was perhaps an oversight that Mr. Ickes, the administrator of the petroleum code, was not accorded the privilege of riding in coast guard planes.

Ickes' assistant in the Public Works administration, Col. Henry M. Waite, toured the whole country by army airplane, inspecting PWA projects, and later went on a junket down the Atlantic coast "observing the storm damage" preparatory to making allotments to the navy for repairs.

Richberg a Rider, Too.

Donald R. Richberg, former general counsel of NRA, who now has as many title in the New Deal as Mussolini in Italy, has also taken several trips in army planes. Chester C. Davis, administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment act, and E. A. Sheets, chief of the bureau of animal husbandry, made a survey of the drouth area throughout the central region of the country from an army plane.

In addition to the planes which the army and navy must keep in readiness, with pilots, for the New Dealers, the secretary of war, Mr. Dern, and the assistant secretary, Harry Woodring, have private planes furnished by the army—a Ford and a Curtiss-Conger.

LOSS ON BUCKET SHOP DEALS TOLD BY ARMY OFFICER

Loses Fight to Bar Testimony.

Maj. Tate B. Collins of Fort Riley, Kas., told a jury in Judge Walter La Buy's Criminal court yesterday how seven alleged bucket shop operators, on trial for conspiracy, loaded him with a worthless stock and took in exchange $1,800 in cash and 200 shares of an established motor company stock. When he finished his dealings with the bucketeers, Maj. Collins testified, they claimed he owed them $6,390.

The army officer gave his testimony after Judge La Buy had overruled defense objections to his testifying on the ground that the indictment limited the proof to victims in Cook county.

Victory for Prosecution.

This was considered an important victory by Prosecutors Robert Wright and Vernon Thompson who said they expected to call many out of state witnesses.

Maj. Collins testified he instructed Paul A. Luschuck & Co., one of the alleged bucket shop concerns, to buy him stock in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. Immediately, he said, he was hounded with long distance telephone calls in the various cities he visited. Late in August, 1932, he said, he received a letter of confirmation from the brokers notifying him that they had purchased a finance corporation stock for him. He said he notified the company he did not want this stock and to sell it.

Stock's Standing Extolled.

Later, he said, he visited the company offices and was told by P. J. Greene, one of the defendants, that the salesman who had sold him the stock was discharged for drunkenness.

However, Greene added, according to testimony "that it was a smell stock." He said he told them to sell the stock and when he finished with the transaction was told he owed the company $6,390. He never paid the money he said.

WELL-KNOWN SCIENTIST FINDS NEW WAY TO MEASURE "AUTO-DRIVING FATIGUE"

CHICAGO, October, 1934—Why do long, hard drives tire you and wear on your nerves? In dozens of amazing tests, Dr. Andrew H. Ryan, famous authority, discovered a way to measure this type of fatigue.

Dr. Ryan's tests proved that drivers in the new Dodge showed 54% to 65% less fatigue as shown by nervous and muscular impairment than in other cars tested.

Dodge has an unusual combination of advanced engineering features that completely protect you from engine vibrations, road shocks and other causes of fatigue. Obviously, the car lasts longer, runs with fewer repairs, when destructive vibration is smothered.

Ask your Dodge dealer for a free copy of the booklet telling in detail all about Dr. Ryan's tests. Then drive a Dodge. See for your own satisfaction Dodge is easier riding, easier on your nerves, easier to drive!

INTIMATE FACTS!
Send for free copy of "Things People Won't Talk About," a new 32-page illustrated book telling what venereal diseases are, what they do, how they are contracted, how to avoid them, and how they can be cured. Mailed in plain sealed envelope.

A Happy Marriage

rewards those men and women who guard against these diseases

Before you marry, be examined for venereal infections by your family doctor or a good clinic such as the Public Health Institute

Many a matrimonial disaster has been prevented by a timely examination for gonorrhea and syphilis. For these infections are an outstanding cause of unhappy, childless marriages! Yet if caught before marriage, or even during its earlier years, their tragic results can be avoided.

Hence no man or woman should dream of marrying without undergoing an examination for venereal diseases. Then, if infection is discovered, proper medical attention will usually make it possible to marry without risk. This does not necessarily mean a long wait, for it is often possible to treat even those with active syphilis in such a manner that they can shortly marry.

Unless this precaution is taken, there is little chance for an infected couple to live happily together and bring healthy children into the world. Untreated gonorrhea, for instance, is a leading cause of sterility in both sexes, and even if it does not prevent child-bearing it may infect a baby's eyes at birth and result in loss of sight!

Untreated syphilis is an even greater wrecker of marriages, for it makes it practically impossible for a mother to have a normal child. It is responsible not only for most stillbirths, but for the great majority of deformed and feeble-minded infants! That is why every expectant mother should be examined for syphilis as early in her pregnancy as possible.

Aside from their disastrous effects on children, neglected gonorrhea and syphilis are the cause of untold suffering among adults. The former may lead to crippling rheumatism and other disabling afflictions, while the latter may result in blindness, deafness, heart disease, bone destruction, apoplexy, locomotor ataxia, paralysis or even insanity!

Thus every man or woman who contemplates matrimony should lose no time in being examined for venereal diseases. The same applies to married couples as well, for many a wife has been unwittingly infected by a husband who did not know he was diseased or who supposed himself cured.

Your family physician will gladly examine you, or you can go to a good medical clinic such as the Public Health Institute. Here at the Institute, every possible effort is made to spare the patient embarrassment. Semi-private waiting rooms and individual examining rooms are provided, and as an added measure of privacy each patient is known by number instead of by name.

Founded by public-spirited citizens NOT FOR PROFIT, the Public Health Institute specializes in the treatment of venereal diseases at remarkably low fees. An examination for gonorrhea and syphilis, including blood and other tests, costs only $3.00, while some treatments for syphilis cost as little as $1.00 and some of those for gonorrhea still less. Even persons pressed for funds can arrange to be treated.

NOTE: The Public Health Institute has no connection with any other Chicago health or medical institute, and should not be confused with those operated for personal gain!

CONDITIONED AIR DECLARED BOON TO RESTAURANTS

Experts Address Conclave of Cafe Owners.

Air conditioning will increase business by stimulating appetites, and at the same time will create a pleasant atmosphere by decreasing the irritability of customers and employés alike, according to experts who spoke to visitors at the National Restaurant association's sixteenth annual meeting and exposition. The conclave opened yesterday in the American Furniture Mart, 666 Lake Shore drive.

THE TRIBUNE pioneered in air conditioning in the skyscraper field during the past summer. While temperatures soared outside, employés and office dwellers in The Tribune Tower worked in a cool, comfortable atmosphere.

What this great advance in human comfort means to the restaurant industry was explained by F. C. Lyons of the Frigidaire Sales corporation and E. B. McClelland of the General Electric company.

Traces History of Aeration.

Mr. Lyons traced the growth of air conditioning from the time when throwing open windows and doors was the only method to obtain a measure of relief; through the electric fan period, which now supplements vast cooling plants, and up to the present time.

"Air conditioning will attract more people and thereby will increase your business," Mr. Lyons declared. "Once people are within your establishment, air conditioning will stimulate appetites to a certain degre, and thereby will increase the amounts of individual checks.

"On a hot summer's day, air conditioning will also go a long way toward reducing the irritability of customers, both new and old. This makes it easier for employés to please, and when they do that you are building good will.

Summer Better than Winter.

"If you have been conducting a war against any depression in your business, let me say that here is one of the heaviest pieces of field artillery you can utilize. The public is living in a different world, in a different realm where service, where new ideas, where innovations in the midst of keen competition play very important parts."

Mr. McClelland predicted that by controled atmosphere restaurants can actually increase their summer trade to a point where it will exceed winter business.

"One restaurant owner reported his largest dollar volume on the hottest day of the year," he said. "All through business history, success has followed the firms and individuals who have been most active in rendering some service to the public."

Blue Eagle Plucking Today.

Today Al B. Carder of Chicago, president of the association and chairman of the industry's code authority, will explain why the NRA code is "the most successful failure the industry has ever known." The Blue Eagle, he declared yesterday, has become the emblem of the chiseler. Some are trying to live up to the code without flying the Blue Eagle, he said, while the cheaters display it prominently.

David Ovens, president of the National Retail Dry Goods association, also will speak today on "What Chance Has the Little Fellow?"

Visitors to the convention were entertained at A Century of Progress Exposition last night by Swift & Co., at the Swift bridge. A buffet supper was served and stars from various villages of the Fair provided entertainment.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

In SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE it was stated that three major railway passenger associations, including the Western, had announced round trip rates to the Fair of 1 cent a mile. H. W. Siddall, chairman of the Western association, yesterday said his group had had a 1 cent per mile rate with a ten day stopover privilege since last May. The erroneous information was furnished by the Century of Progress publicity department.

PERSIA FORCES BRITAIN TO GRANT RIGHTS IN GULF

Also Wins Promise of Oil Royalties.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Persian foreign minister, Mirza Seyyid Bagher Khan Kazemi, who has been paying a secret 48 hour visit to London, left today after an intensive conference with Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, over the vexed question of oil in the Bahrein Islands.

As a result Kazemi won recognition of Persia's sovereignty in its own gulf and the promise of adequate royalties.

British Puppet Set Up.

The trouble arose over the claim, made a few years ago by the British, to the sovereignty of the Bahrein islands in the Persian gulf. The British instaled their own puppet sultan in the islands.

No one paid much attention until last year when rich oil deposits were discovered. The sultan, acting under British direction, gave a concession to Standard Oil company of California, which was acting in the closest coöperation with the Anglo-Persian interests to develop the deposits. The Persia shah protested to Great Britain, the United States and the league of nations, but no notice was taken, and recently there was a threatened strike of all workmen in the Anglo-Persian fields.

Respond to Serious Threat.

A strike would cripple the supply of oil for the British navy, and it made Great Britain sit up and take notice. Also, Persia threatened to enter an offensive and defensive alliance with Turkey.

The suggestion now made, and which Kazemi is taking back to Teheran, is that the British acknowledge Persia's sovereignty over the waters of the gulf, and establish an Anglo-Persian joint dominion over the islands, insuring Persia a fair share of the oil royalties.

RELIEF OFFICIALS BAN POLITICS IN WORKERS' RANKS

The Illinois emergency relief commission yesterday issued an order decreeing summary dismissal of any employés who mix politics or religious considerations with their relief duties. Continued employment, the order emphasized, must be on the basis of competency alone and only actual need should be the only consideration in the handling of relief applicants and recipients.

WINTER RELIEF COST HIGHEST IN STATE'S HISTORY

Expenses and Number of "Clients" Soar.

Emergency unemployment relief expenditures for Illinois and the number of "clients" who will be benefited this winter are to touch heights which are unprecendented in the state's history of public welfare.

Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, yesterday made public estimates showing that $79,270,000 will be needed for the six months from October to March inclusive, and that a record number of 360,000 families will be on the relief rolls in January alone.

The staggering trend is emphasized by a contrast with the figures of the preceding comparative months. A year ago in the same inclusive months the actual expenditures totaled $35,666,000, while the highest number of families on the public relief rolls was 232,904 in November of 1933.

Cost More Than Doubled.

These comparative figures mean that in a year's time—and since the New Deal came into being—the state's unemployment relief expenditures will have more than doubled, increased 122 per cent, in fact, while the number of families will jump 54 per cent.

Mr. Reynolds said that the estimates of anticipated needs this winter were based on past experiences and seasonal trends. The calculations were made by Chief Statistician Robert J. Myers of the relief commission. Last week, when the October needs were announced, the statistician attributed the sizeable increase in part to elevated relief standards downstate.

Gets $7,689,900 More.

Mr. Reynolds returned from Washington Sunday with an allotment of $7,689,900 of federal funds, to be augmented by state relief money for this month's needs. The federal sum received was $1,688,306 under that requested for October. Work relief curtailments and other adjustments for Illinois disbursements are now being made by the commission's staf to stay within the limit of the $11,015,000 available for the present month.

Assurance also was given to the local officials that November will receive similar federal consideration, and that the December relief needs for the state in all likelihood will be supplied wholly by the federal relief administration. No state money will be on hand for December.

Needs Up to Legislature.

Action of some kind for 1935 relief needs is to be considered in the state legislature which meets in regular session in January.

Following is a table of comparison showing how the state's relief burden is leaping upward under the National Recovery administration.

Oct.	$6,583,897	216,295	$11,015,000	295,000
Nov.	6,307,235	232,904	12,345,000	315,000
Dec.	6,311,849	221,131	13,425,000	335,000
Jan.	5,054,177	183,878	14,870,000	360,000
Feb.	4,915,876	181,386	13,975,000	355,000
Mar.	6,492,601	212,620	13,740,000	340,000

Mr. Reynolds stated yesterday that the commission is not seriously contemplating the substitution of cash in lieu of food, fuel, and clothing orders to all clients.

ALABAMA AFTER TWO SCOTTSBORO BRIBE SUSPECTS

Pair Held at Nashville; Guilt Denied.

Huntsville, Ala., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Alabama authorities tonight took steps to bring into their custody two men held at Nashville, Tenn., on charges of attempting to bribe Mrs. Victoria Price, the state's principal witness in the "Scottsboro case," to change her testimony.

Armed with information gained from J. W. Pearson of Birmingham, arrested on a similar charge Saturday, Sherif Ben Giles left for Montgomery to obtain a requisition for the two men.

They gave Tennessee police the names of Daniel Swift, "a New York attorney," and Sol Kone, also of New York. They were taken into custody yesterday on instructions of Chief of Police H. C. Rakemore.

Prisoner Accuses Two.

Pearson was arrested Saturday as he drove Mrs. Price on a highway toward Nashville on a warant sworn to by the woman. Pearson then swore to a similar warant against Swift, and Jack Tiller, bodyguard for Mrs. Price, made an affidavit against Kone.

Sherif Giles said Pearson had directed him to his home in Birmingham to obtain letters he alleged were written him by Swift and others concerning contacting Mrs. Price.

The woman told officers five weeks ago that Pearson approached her with an offer of $500 to sign an affidavit repudiating her testimony in seven trials in the case.

Mrs. Price advised police Thursday that the offer had been renewed with $1,000 offered if she would change her testimony. In company with Pearson, Mrs. Price left the city in an automobile en route to Nashville to obtain the money and sign the affidavit. A short distance out of the city Pearson was arrested.

Two Testify at Trials.

Mrs. Price with Ruby Bates testified in the first trials at Scottsboro, from which the case took its name, that they were attacked by twelve Negroes aboard a Southern railway freight train as it rumbled through the mountains of Jackson county.

In the first trials they identified the nine Negroes held as their attackers, but after her disappearance in 1933 the Bates girl made a dramatic appearance in the second trial of Haywood Patterson at Decatur, under change of venue, and repudiated her testimony.

Distribute Two Million in Delinquent Tax Funds

County Treasurer Nash yesterday distributed $2,153,413 in delinquent tax collections to the various taxing bodies. The city received the largest share, $1,239,630, the remainder being appropriated to the governing bodies in the county.

ALBINO GOLDFISH FOUND WITH RED CROSS ON BACK

An albino goldfish bearing a well defined and almost perfect red cross on its back was discovered yesterday by workmen draining Lincoln park pools for the winter. The fish was taken to the Lincoln park aquarium, where Floyd S. Young, director of the aquarium and the Lincoln park zoo, declared that the fish was simply a freak and that the presence of the red cross couldn't be explained.

"Ive seen a number of albino goldfish, but none marked like this one," Mr. Young declared. "I won't attempt to explain what caused the unusual concentration of pigment in that particular form."

THE APPEAL TO UNREASON.

President Roosevelt fixes his justification of governmental procedure at present to an amazing assumption. He bases the departure from traditional ideas upon the conclusion that the American people with their fate their own were losing their liberty and being drawn in helplessly to the "service of the privileged few."

The progress of such enslavement may have been clearer to Mr. Roosevelt than it was to a majority of American citizens unconscious of it.

The statement, if made with due consideration of what appear in the White House as the facts of American life, is in tenor and import singular and alone in the utterances of American Presidents. It is such a statement as is used to justify the extreme of revolution.

Democracy undoubtedly is faced with some new problems in these days. There is a temptation in universal suffrage to consider that economic well-being can be managed at the polling place and that the electorate can create a government capable of handling all human affairs with wisdom and justice and happy result. The lure which may bewitch a body politic is the thought that political law can take the place of economic law.

Many of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers, the advisers to whom greatest influence is attributed, are of this opinion. The opinion presupposes the condition which Mr. Roosevelt described in one paragraph of his speech Sunday night. No one could have made a stronger statement of it; that a privileged few are regimenting the American people, in which process the people are losing their freedom and their liberty and the privileged few are becoming their masters. The government then steps in to rescue these masses from peonage. With an election approaching, the people are asked to indorse the view and sign the warant.

The doctrin of exploited masses and privileged mastery is the Marxian view. The Russian government is a government founded on the theory of preventing this exploitation by communistic control of capital and production. It is not, however, democracy finding a solution. The first thing to be destroyed is democracy itself. Nor has the degree of exploitation been changed, but only the personnel of the exploiters. Nevertheless it is the logical result of substituting governmental dictatorship for private enterprise.

For the present American government Mr. Roosevelt asks a truce which will grant the time required for the full governmental intervention between the people and the intention of the privileged few who have been destroying the liberties of America. When the election is held in November there will have been a year and a half of administrative adventures which have brought to many people a consciousness of restrictions of which they had never been aware. The results of these advantages have not thus far been favorable. They have produced such a fear of consequence that prospects now seem more doubtful than they have at any other time. Mr. Roosevelt's confidence does not prevail. If it did there would not be such fear of the next steps the government will take.

Within the customary political processes of the country the administration submits to an accounting and a judgment. There must be a verdict which in this case will have two clauses. Has the government adopted measures wise as to and within an emergency such as it has declared to exist? Are these measures, now described as being permanently in the American texture, good or bad in the long view?

The second question overshadows the first. The voters are not asked to indorse a government in its exercise of emergency powers, but to sanction one in which these powers will be extended and fixed. It is proposed that one period of the American republic shall be regarded as ended. It had its place in the sun. It ran its permissible time. Its principles and procedures were good in their day, but that day came to an end. This is an extraordinary conclusion and extraordinary statements are required to support it, such as the declaration that the American people are regimented by the privileged few.

The evidence rests upon the say so of a score of men, most of them new to the responsibilities of government and unfamiliar with the management of affairs. With a year and a half of unrestrained authority and the cash and bonds of the nation at their disposal, they appeal from the failures of the present to the promises of the future, denying the validity of what has happened to give credibility to something that cannot.

Upon such testimony the people are asked to believe that they can escape ruin and slavery only by surrendering their tested rights, turning their backs on their history, discarding their laws, and by trusting to something toward which they have always had a precautionary restraint, the political organization of society.

Of this it can be said that at least it is not the appeal to reason or to fact. Let the average American examine it for himself.

AMBASSADOR BINGHAM, FREEMAN.

Robert W. Bingham, United States ambassador to Great Britain, was made an honorary freeman of Barnstaple, England's oldest chartered borough. There were many references in the pleasant ceremonies conducted by the Devonshire townspeople and the ambassador's hosts to the links between ancient Barnstaple and its Massachusetts namesake and to the ambassador's ancestral strain which entitled him to the honorary freemanship.

The distinction is one which Mr. Bingham may cherish in later days and if he looked about him in Barnstaple he might have gathered many curious little mementos of liberty's heritage to bring back to the United States as keepsakes when he returns. If by that time they have become anachronisms here, he will at least have remembrance of them by the fireside of a winter evening.

The chartered towns of England had a great many liberties which from time to time they rescued from a central power finding them inconvenient obstacles to desired authority. The supposititious barrier at Temple Bar in the city of London is even now a symbol of the ancient truth that the king may not enter legally without permission.

If not in the Barnstaple charter, at least in the law of the land, Mr. Bingham might find an oddity which presently some of his fellow countrymen at home will find interesting. If a medieval English agricultural serf could make his way into a town and get a job at a trade, he became a free man in a year and a day. When the American farmer has had a full dose of the AAA he may escape from Mr. Wallace and Dr. Tugwell by slipping into the towns, providing they in turn can rescue themselves from Mr. Richberg and the new NRA.

AN OLD SPORT RECOGNIZED.

During the current year THE TRIBUNE has presented to the public the fifth Chicagoland Music Festival, the All Star-Bears football game and the Lewis-Londos wrestling bout, and in each case the public has shown its appreciation by a record attendance for an event of the kind. Construction of W-G-N's new studio building, next door to the Tribune Tower, now offers a fourth attraction to a class of sportsmen too much neglected in recent years. For the first time since 1929 the building watchers are out in force on Michigan avenue. Unlike the recent meeting of Mr. Londos with Mr. Lewis, this can hardly claim to be a world's championship building-watch, for the foundations were laid some years ago and, consequently, there is no steam shovel. Even so, perhaps the gentlemen in the sports department can give the event the publicity it deserves by arranging with the hoisting engineers' union to let the building watchers vote on who is to run the derrick winch.

BRITISH RECOVERY.

September reports from Great Britain dwell optimistically on what are set up as evidences of healthy recovery. One indication is an increase in the savings of working men. Another is that luxury spending has taken a jump. The English optimists frequently take occasion to overstate their progress, but they laid the groundwork for it quietly, some time before the United States decided to take the opposite direction from what responsible British statesmen thought was headed toward substantial gain.

Great Britain had become radical while the United States still adhered to tested principles of government. Labor had had its fling, with a minority party in charge of government, and the United States was studying the radical labor program when the British led the way into collapse. Their first step, when they were confronted with disastrous consequences, was to ease the radicals out.

Ramsay MacDonald was retained in a nominal position as prime minister in a government which the conservatives of the coalition gradually took over. The change was sealed when Mr. MacDonald was sent on a long vacation and the conservatives began to shape things to their own ends. The soft pedal on the radical elements of government has begun to show results, and in time Great Britain may offer the United States something in contrast to its own policies quite as much as it is in contrast to the despotism which prevails over most of continental Europe and which seems to attract our own statesmen as much as it alarms thoughtful Americans.

Editorial of the Day

AGAIN, THE LAW'S DELAYS.

[Illinois State Journal.]

The latest in the way of Chicago crusades is a drive to speed up the courts of that community. In the Circuit and Superior courts of the Cook county jurisdiction 84,500 lawsuits are pending for trial or settlement, and judges have agreed to stay on the job until the blockade is opened. For the first week of the fall term the judges scheduled 2,500 cases for trial.

Thus far results have been anything but satisfactory. By way of illustration, Judge James J. Kelly reported that he had called 254 cases without hitting one where the lawyers were ready for trial. Judge Michael L. McKinley had a like experience with 100 cases which were called in his court. Almost all of the judges, it was reported, found themselves out of work after 11 o'clock in the morning. They blame the lawyers for not getting ready to go to trial.

Apparently Cook county judges are unable to do anything in the way of speeding up business and relieving their congested dockets. The bar association might do something to this end, but it would probably find the task an embarrassing one. So long as litigants do not complain of the delay, ethical members of the bar do not feel that they are called on to discipline their brothers. The public has an interest, of course, but the public is without representation in politically controled courts.

Some day, perhaps, clients who are buried in this pile of delayed litigation will have an awakening. Possibly they will come to realize that they are victims of a practice which is sucking their substance—that every delay and continuance means loss of time and money and dissipation by the lawyers of whatever they have at stake. When these litigants come to see themselves as their lawyers see them, and know that they are being played and plucked as come-ons in a confidence game, we shall hear less of the law's delays and congestion of court dockets.

PEDDLER.

In the market place, where the bargaining crowd
Gathers to buy and to sell,
I met an old man with an empty cart
Swinging a rusty cow bell.
I looked inside of the bottomless cart,
And through it I saw the ground.
And listened . . . but heard no sound.
I drew near and said: "Good man, I believe
The clapper is gone from your bell.
And what is it, please, that you wish to buy,
Since you have nothing to sell?"
The old man gazed at my smiling face,
And slowly he bowed his head.
He looked at the bell in his wrinkled hand,
And these are the words he said:
"The world, my dear, is a market place
Where only the young are heard.
The old have nothing of value to sell . . .
Not ever a tear . . . or a word.
The fire of youth has snuffed from my eyes
(Its flame still glows in my heart . . .);
To be near the young I come to this place,
Pushing this old empty cart."

HOW THE WORLD CHANGES! Soldiers for a hundred years have had a wise saw they loved to repeat over and over. When the battle is raging fiercest and comrades are falling all around them they repeat over and over, "The bullet hasn't been made that is going to hit me." And now in this day and age we say, "Well, the automobile hasn't left the factory that is going to run over me." Sometimes the soldier was wrong.

WHAT'S BECOME of Indian summer? We go around with overcoats on looking high and low for it, but all in vain. The leaves still manage to stay green and there is no gorgeous autumnal coloring anywhere in sight. But it's cold. Where is the soft blue haze, the goldenrod nodding in the hollows, the red and green and gold leaves fluttering to and fro across the woodland paths? We're being cheated out of something and if the administration down at Washington doesn't do something about it the Republicans ought to grab it and make it a campaign issue. We must have our Indian summer and at once. Write to your congressman today.

A CASUAL glance at the latest styles in evening gowns which the girls will wear this fall and winter seems to argue that the back to nature movement is in full sway. The lower limbs ("legs" are so vulgar) are most amply protected, the skirt rivaling a street sweeper in brushing the surface of the earth, but the back of the wearer is displayed, oh, all the back the wearer's got. In the days gone by the backbone was not considered quite polite and was never placed on exhibition in public. But the style experts finally discovered it and they've simply gone mad over it, and shapely forms, lovely eyes, wavy tresses, swanlike throats and perfect thirty-sixes are as naught compared to a beautiful spinal column. Very soon the poets will take note of the matter and write "Ode to a Spinal Column," and "Sonnet on a Perfect Back," and "The Lay of a Vertebra," and things like that. Next spring—well, I'm not worrying about what next spring may bring me of weal or woe, but I certainly should love to live through this fall and winter. Yes, indeed, as the old song put it, "Backward, turn back-ward, Oh Time, in Thy Flight." Yes, indeed, yes, indeed. That is, if it's a good looking back.

What is greater, what is more complete
Than this first belief when young eyes meet?

WHOOPING COUGH.

OTHER than measles, no infection of infancy and childhood holds such wide sway or is more dangerous than whooping cough. No age is wholly immune, although the disease is usually contracted early in life. It causes an untold amount of suffering, and in the very young is attended with a high mortality—higher than that of any other communicable disease. About 300,000 cases of whooping cough were reported in the United States during 1932, and there were about 6,000 deaths. Of these, nearly 95 per cent occurred before the third year of life. Whooping cough causes as many deaths as do scarlet fever and measles combined.

Despite the danger that accompanies the disease some parents seem to regard the infection lightly and look upon it as "a bad half hour" to be got through with as soon as possible. This attitude can be accounted for only on the assumption that the serious character of the disease is not appreciated, nor the high death rate well known.

The disease is spread by direct contact with infected particles from the mouth, nose, and throat of an active case. Eating utensils, handkerchiefs, toys, and in fact anything that has come in contact with a child who has the disease may serve as the communicating agent. Whooping cough is contagious from its earliest stages until convalescence is well established.

The first symptoms are usually noted about seven days after exposure and are frequently mistaken for a mild cold. Fever develops gradually, symptoms of a cold become more manifest, and the cough makes its appearance. Within a few days the cough increases in frequency and it is then that the disease is usually recognized because of the choking, spasmodic character of the cough that seems to be worse at night. Then follows a period of from four to eight weeks in which the nutrition of the child suffers, the blood is deprived of the proper amount of oxygen, and there may be very distressing symptoms due to the persistent coughing spells.

The seizures begin with a sense of suffocation. There is usually a short pause in breathing, a sound as though the child were choking, followed by a deep inspiration, and then a series of expulsive coughs in rapid sequence. During the "spell" air does not enter the lungs and the face assumes a bloated, swollen, and purplish appearance. As soon as the spasm ceases, there follows the deep sucking in of air that gives the characteristic whoop. As many as fifty or more attacks may occur in each twenty-four hours. Frequently vomiting follows or accompanies the attack, and, unless great care and attention are paid to feeding the child promptly, starvation becomes a real menace.

In 1906 two French observers described an organism that is generally believed to be the causative factor in whooping cough. The organism is called the bacillus pertussis. Within the last few years laboratory workers have developed a whooping cough vaccine that holds great promise. Because of the peculiar nature of the organism special methods of culture are required, and only by the use of these methods has it been possible to develop a suitable vaccine.

So far as is known, the vaccine is of little, if any, help after the disease has once been established. It will, however, protect a very high percentage of children if used at least four months before exposure occurs. The vaccine is protective rather than curative. A considerable number of young patients immunized through the use of whooping cough vaccine have been repeatedly exposed without danger. Because of the unusually fatal character of the disease, especially in the first two years of life, vaccine administration should be begun shortly after the age of six months.

Prevention consists in avoiding contacts with known cases of the disease. If whooping cough exists in your neighborhood, make certain that your children avoid every possible exposure. Should whooping cough develop in your home, see that the neighbors' children are not permitted any association with the patient under your care.

From Across the Sea

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—As a result of the lesson taught by the disorders of the past year the strength of the Paris garrisons is to be substantially increased. Preparations are being rushed to house more troops in the barracks in the vicinity of the capital and reinforcements will be brought in on Oct. 19 and 20.

Three infantry regiments, with battalions stationed in Paris, Courbevoie, Coulomiers, Satory, and Fontainebleau, will be given 700 more autumn recruits than usual—1,300 instead of 600 each—and similar increases will be made in the strength of cavalry squadrons charged with protecting the capital.

Gen. Vary, commander of the 10th division, which these regiments compose, is carrying out the change under direct orders from Marshal Petain, war minister.

While maintenance of order in case of outbreaks is usually the job of the Gardes Mobiles—a national constabulary—who reinforce the police, troops have been used in such emergencies as the riots of Feb. 6. Since then local commanders have complained that the number of men at their disposal is dangerously small.

The change planned brings the Paris garrisons up to the strength of regular frontier units for the first time in many years.

UTOPIA.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—What would happen if the nations of the world or league of nations would agree to set a standard price on all products—labor, money, and real estate? Would not the whole world become balanced and this method eliminate unfair competition, labor disputes, strikes, and unfair dealings between nations? Would not this method eliminate the fear of war between nations and make it possible for humans to live anywhere? Would not nations strive for better products, better labor conditions, and better social conditions? Would there be any use for tarifs? How can you get a stable government when nothing else is stable and everything is unbalanced? Even the people are unbalanced and depressed in that they do not know where they are at and what to do or how to better their condition.

Why not divide the existing labor work by shorter hours in a manner to put everybody to work so that everybody could draw some kind of a weekly wage and get away from relief help for the time being? If the above means were carried out, would there be any need for government control in any sense, and would not the laws of supply and demand cause a demand for proper working hours, better wages, more products, and sure profits for the manufacturer and invested capital? JOSEPH ELGER.

FEES FOR LOUP RIVER.

Columbus, Neb., Sept. 26.—During the last few months a number of articles have appeared in THE TRIBUNE referring to the Loup river power development at Columbus, Neb. We have paid no attention to these as they have had an import that has been entirely political.

However, an article by Percy Wood appeared in your issue of Sept. 20 which cannot go unchallenged.

This article is under a Freeport, Ill., date line and reports a speech by C. Wayland Brooks. It is protected by quotations which confuse the source of the statements. The statement to which we take exception is as follows: "In Nebraska the directors of the Loup river public power project awarded an engineering contract for $426,000 to a new company formed by the brother-in-law of one of the directors who had no previous engineering experience. Department of justice agents uncovered the facts after PWA whitewashed its own investigation and a new contract was drawn with fees of only $60,000, eliminating $366,000 from some influential pockets."

This is a deliberate attempt on the part of some one to convey the impression that the directors approved a contract for $426,000, which we were forced to reduce to $60,000. The facts are that a contract was submitted by the district under which the Harza Engineering company of Chicago was to be employed to design and supervise the construction of the project and also inspect and pass on all material and machinery. Their entire compensation for these services was to be 5 per cent of the cost of the entire project. The PWA directed that a contract be entered into with the Harza Engineering company for consulting engineering only for a compensation of 1 per cent of the cost of the project, exclusive of real estate, not to exceed $60,000.

The statement "eliminating $366,000 from influential pockets" is a malicious misrepresentation. The Harza Engineering company is an old established Chicago firm and has designed and constructed some of the leading hydro-electric plants in the country. No member of the board of directors is related in any way to any member of the Harza firm. C. C. SHELDON,

Treasurer, Loup River Public Power District.

BRICKS WITHOUT STRAW.

Watertown, S. D., Sept. 28.—Thirty-five hundred years ago a ruler of a great nation tried to compel a captive people within his dominions to manufacture bricks without straw, a difficult proposition, which didn't work out. That ruler wound up at the bottom of the Red sea with his soldiers, horses, and chariots, his bows, spears, shields, and armor—and that was the end of him.

Today another leader of another and far greater nation is trying, via his NRA and kindred activities, to force a considerable portion of his own people to do the same thing and is discovering that it still doesn't work.

C. W. RITCHIE.

THE SALES TAX.

Du Quoin, Ill., Sept. 28.—There has been a lot of talk as to what is causing a lot of the merchants of Illinois to go broke, and this can very easily be figured out if you will take a pencil and a piece of paper and take the time to analyze just what the 2 per cent state sales tax does. While the 2 per cent tax seems to be but a small item, if you will run out the figures very surprising results are obtained.

Based on a cost price of an article at $1, with 25 per cent added, it makes the 2 per cent sales tax cost the merchant 10 per cent of his profit from his sales, as the tax is based on the cost price of the article, plus the profit that is added by the merchant.

On a basis of 20 per cent profit it figures 12 per cent. On a 15 per cent basis the figures will show 15.33 per cent. On a basis of a 10 per cent mark-up it shows 22 per cent, and on a mark-up of 5 per cent this small sales tax would amount to 42 per cent of the profit.

This is a burden which has been placed on the merchants and business men by the Democratic party of this state, and it is high time that everybody concerned should rise up against such unfair and unjust taxation. W. S. BURRIS,

President, Du Quoin Iron and Supply Co.

HARDY PERENNIAL.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The editorial remarks on the yacht races in today's TRIBUNE allow much credit to the Swedish sailors. If you had said Norwegian sailors you would have been correct, since there was perhaps no Swede among the lot. It would have been appropriate also, as suggested, to name the sail after Mae West since she is also of Norwegian ancestry and as dashing as the sailors who won the races. B. ALLISON.

SMUTTY BOOKS.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—The parade against indecent movies was a very meritorius piece of work, but the circulating libraries with their smutty and sex suggesting story books which are read by boys and girls in their early teens have been overlooked. Let's purify our circulating libraries. DR. A. O. FRANA.

AUTO DEATH TOLL HERE 100 AHEAD OF LAST YEAR'S

Four of First Nine Months Top Century Mark.

The automobile death rate in Cook county for this year is running more than 100 ahead of the figure at this time in 1933, it was shown yesterday by figures compiled in the office of Coroner Frank J. Walsh.

RITCHEY CONNOR.

Up until yesterday 894 persons had been killed in automobile accidents, as compared to 781 for the first nine months of 1933. A comparison by months follows:

January	122	81
February	76	59
March	106	78
April	93	72
May	97	104
June	92	99
July	103	91
August	107	101
September	98	96
	894	781

Abandons Car Victim's Body.

Nicholas J. Murphy, 56 years old, 3638 Lexington street, janitor at the May school, struck down by a hit and run automobile yesterday, was lifted into a passing car and then dragged out and left dead in front of 537 South Lawndale avenue as the Good Samaritan fled in panic.

Two hours later police arrested Ritchey Connor, 28 years old, Negro, a chauffeur for Ila D. Reid, 536 South Elmwood avenue, Oak Park, an official of Sears, Roebuck & Co. Shortly after the arrest at the Reid home he was identified by two little girls who had seen him take Murphy out of the car.

Follow Up Slim Clew.

Policemen William H. Jannisch and Emil Piksa of the Lawndale station brought about Connor's arrest through one slender clew. They learned from Marie Georgopoulos, 13 years old, 557 South Lawndale avenue, and Johanna Malone, 13 years old, 519 South Lawndale avenue, who saw Connor's flight, that he was in livery and driving a large green sedan. They assumed the car might be owned by an official of the Sears store nearby, and traced the driver through information gained there.

At first Connor denied having been near the scene, but afterward admitted he had seen the body in the street. Police were unable to find any marks on the Reid car to indicate it had struck Murphy. Connor was held for further investigation.

According to Murphy's son, Edward, the victim had been employed in the city treasurer's office, and had been on sick leave since Sept. 3, suffering from a heart ailment.

Since the bruises on his body were not serious, it was believed the heart condition might have caused death.

Murphy's death and one other brought Cook county's traffic toll for 1934 to 896. The other victim:

Vincent Lupo, 9 years old, 3431 Lexington street. Died at the Garfield Park hospital of injuries received when he was hit by a car earlier in the day in front of 3500 Fillmore street. Irving Lang, 3826 West Roosevelt road, the driver, was not held.

ROOSEVELT BEER PARTY ACCUSER OFF METHODISTS' BOARD

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—The Rev. L. L. Hand of Lambertville, who on Saturday, read before the Methodist Episcopal state conference a report charging that President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave a boisterous beer party at the White House, was revealed today as no longer a member of the church's powerful board of temperance, which he headed for five years.

His reading of the report—later rejected by the conference, which sent an apology to the President—had nothing to do with his elimination from the board, according to the Rev. Thomas S. Brock, superintendent of the Trenton district, which includes Hand's church.

"Mr. Hand has been on the board a long time, and we try to change the membership of the board every so often," was the explanation.

State Senator J. Rusling Leap of Salem county, a lay delegate, who offered a substitute report, much milder, which the conference adopted after rejecting Hand's drastic criticism, today was made a new member of the board.

SAFETY COUNCIL OPENS CONCLAVE AT CLEVELAND

25 States and 125 Cities Send Delegates.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—The twenty-third annual conference of the National Safety council opened here today and will continue through Friday. At the initial sessions, it was indicated that this is no ordinary yearly meeting. The first nine months of 1934 have been attended by a rising toll of automobile fatalities that is arousing the public from coast to coast.

From twenty-five states and 125 cities have come 3,000 delegates to advise and to learn how this death rate from motor traffic, as sanguinary as the world war, might be abated. As in Chicago under Mayor Kelly's "keep Chicago safe committee," almost every city in the Union is campaigning to cut its street accidents. And these delegates, by comparing various experiences under various methods of approaching the problem, are expected to reach some general conclusions of value to all.

Illinois Well Represented.

Chicago and Illinois are well represented here to carry home this advice. Seen at the initial sessions were Sidney Williams and his staf of engineers from the headquarters of the National Safety Council in Chicago; Harry Harrison, traffic engineer of the Illinois highway department; W. H. Klapproth, traffic engineer of the Cook county division of the state department; George Travers, manager of the Chicago Safety Council, and Franklin Kreml, head of the Evanston accident prevention bureau.

The nation is becoming aroused because, at the present rate, 35,000 men, women and children will be killed in the United States this year as compared with 31,000 in 1933 and as compared with a previous high annual toll of 33,700 in 1931. Illinois is aroused because in the eighteen months ended June 30, 1934, 3,288 of its citizens were killed by motor cars as compared with 2,605 who died in action and of wounds in eighteen months of the world war.

Roosevelt Sends Message.

President Roosevelt sent a message to the conference expressing "keen personal interest" in the proglem.

"American automotive development," he said, "and our unequalled system of highway communications, which have given signal contributions to our convenience, pleasure and commerce, must not be permitted to devolve into instruments of death and disaster."

John E. Long of Albany, N. Y., president of the council, in an address opening the conference, suggested four causes for the 20 per cent increase in the motor death rate. 1, Relaxed law enforcement; 2, old vehicles unsafe from wear and neglect; 3, greater speed of newer cars; 4, increased use of liquor by motorists.

Asks Police Efficiency.

Burton W. Marsh of the American Automobile association, president of the Institute of Traffic Engineers, said that efficient police and courts are essential to any reduction in automobile deaths and that all other efforts are of little avail without the police and the courts. Chicago, with the second highest motor death rate of any large city in America, is preparing an elaborate safety program while the police lack the respect of the motorists.

William C. Knoeik, chairman of the safety commission in Milwaukee, Wis., which had the lowest traffic death rate of any city of its class last year, rated this respect from the motorists as the first essential of accident prevention.

Judge Thomas V. Holland of the Kansas City, Mo., Municipal court, told of valued contributions by radio and newspapers in attacking the drunken drivers of his community. Kansas City has enacted an ordinance revoking for one year the city license of any driver convicted of operating a car while intoxicated.

Urges Chemical Test.

Dr. H. A. Heise of the Columbia hospital, Milwaukee, advocated a chemical test of body fluids of motorists suspected of driving while intoxicated.

ORDER RECKLESS DRIVERS SENT TO SAFETY SCHOOL

City Agencies Move to Cut Trafic Deaths.

The campaign to reduce the automobile death toll brought several developments yesterday.

Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee at a meeting in the Hotel Sherman adopted a recommendation to organize a Trafic Safety school, where motor violators may be sent by judges of the Municipal court.

Munipal Judge Harold P. O'Connell opened the new Safety court in the Criminal Courts building by sending two drunken drivers to serve sentences of ten days each in the house of correction.

Municipal Judge John Gutknecht took steps to reorganize the traffic court by dismissing all minor motor vehicle violations which had been committed before Sept. 1, so the court can start with a clean slate.

Invite Some; Send Others.

The Trafic Safety school, which will be conducted by the committee, will invite as pupils all motorists who wish to become acquainted with the motor vehicle laws of the state and city. The judges of the municipal court have promised to coöperate with the committee by sending defendants to the school whom they believe should be given lessons in careful driving. The details of the school were worked out by Charles M. Hayes of the Chicago Motor club.

The classes will be conducted in a school building or theater and will have for its instructors judges, lawyers, and traffic experts. Evening classes will be held twice a week. It is expected that the school will be put into operation within the next ten days.

On Relief But Drinks.

John Edwards, 27 years old, 1629 Dayton street, and Charles Yamazaki, 38 years old, 1815 South Damen avenue, were the two sentenced to the Bridewell for driving while intoxicated by Judge O'Connell. Edwards, who is on the relief rolls, crashed into three parked automobiles while driving at a high speed near Center street and Sheffield avenue Sunday afternoon. He admitted having drank two beers.

"I don't know how you find money to buy beer when you are on relief," declared Judge O'Connell, imposing the sentence.

Yamazaki, a Japanese restaurant owner, ran into a bus near Michigan boulevard and Roosevelt road early Sunday morning. No one was injured. Witnesses testified that he was intoxicated.

BASSO IN COURT ON 23 PARKING CHARGES TODAY

George Basso, organizer for the Flat Janitors' union, is scheduled to appear today before Judge John Gutknecht in the Trafic court on 23 charges of automobile parking violations.

Basso, who several weeks ago was fined $1 and costs on each of 12 improper parking accusations, was arrested at his home at 1007 South Mayfield avenue last Saturday. The arrest occurred only a few hours before Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court issued an order canceling all unserved trafic warants issued before Sept. 1, in order to start the current "fixless" campaign with a clean slate. Had the Basso warants not been served, most of them would have been voided by Judge Sonsteby's order.

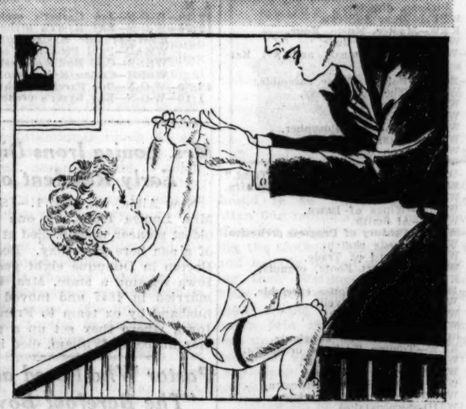
"No foolin'... how's chances for another slice?"

LET HIM HAVE IT, MOTHER . . .

Slo-Baking makes Wonder Bread best for children

When you break the slice apart for him, look at it! Notice how white and pure it is . . . how tender and fluffy it feels. You can almost see that Wonder Bread is easy to digest!

No coaxing now! Not a bit of it. Folks, big and little, eat Wonder Bread because they like its delicious, delicate flavor. And give baby all he wants. Wonder Bread is good for him.



Energy! That's what a fellow needs when he's growing. And there's plenty of it in Wonder Bread. For slo-baking makes each morsel easy to digest . . . gives needed energy quickly!

THERE'S nothing terribly "secret" about slo-baking. It bakes every tiny delicious morsel right through to the heart of the loaf . . . makes it fluffy-light and easy to digest. This is why Wonder Bread is so friendly to tiny stomachs, and why it's such an outstanding hit with grown-ups too.

But that's only part of the story. Slo-baking develops the full delicate flavor of the good things that go into Wonder Bread. It perfects the tender texture. And it seals in the freshness so that every slice is full of flavor until the whole loaf is used. Serve Wonder Bread just once and you'll see why it's on more tables than any other bread. It's at your grocer's . . . oven-fresh!

C. W. STUDEBAKER DIES IN AUTO OF A HEART ATTACK

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Clement W. Studebaker, 73, son of one of the founders of the Studebaker corporation, died of a heart attack this afternoon while riding in his automobile.

The prominent South Bend resident was riding beside his chauffeur, Walter Stepson, when he commented that he suddenly felt a sensation of dizziness.

When about three blocks from home Mr. Studebaker slumped over in the front seat against the chauffeur. A police ambulance was summoned but Mr. Studebaker was dead when it arrived at the home.

Mr. Studebaker was the son of Henry and Susan Studebaker, his father being one of the five brothers who founded the now huge automobile concern when its principal output was wagons.

For nearly a decade Clement W. Studebaker had taken no active interest in business and never had been directly interested in the corporation which bears his family name.

His South Bend home was directly across the street from the palatial residence of his cousin, Col. George Studebaker, who lost the place last year in collapse of his Insull and other public utility stocks. Clement W. was also a cousin of Clement Studebaker Jr., head of several public utility organizations, who died of a heart attack Dec. 3, 1932, in his Lake Shore drive apartment in Chicago.

$500,000 ESTATE DIVISION RESTS ON BABY'S BIRTH

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 1.—(AP)—The birth of a baby will determine the disposition of $500,000 of the estate of Paul F. Donnelly, former Kansas City garment manufacturer who died recently in Hartford, Conn.

An application for letters of administration of the $1,000,000 estate, filed today, said the young widow, Miss Virginia George, actress, whom Donnelly married in February, 1933, expected a child next January. The child, if born alive, will receive half the estate and the other half will be divided among the widow and eight of Mrs. Donnelly's relatives. If the child is born dead its share will be divided among the relatives and the other half will go to the widow.

Donnelly and Mrs. Nell Quinlan Donnelly were divorced in 1932. The first Mrs. Donnelly later married James A. Reed, former U. S. senator from Missouri.

Three Buried in Grave at Carbondale, Ill., Cemetery

Carbondale, Ill., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Three persons, a mother, her son and his wife, are buried in the same grave. The third was added today when the casket of Mrs. C. W. Williams, 96, was placed beside the urns containing the ashes of the other two. Mrs. Williams had been an invalid four years, following a fall. She had not been informed of the death of her son Dennard Williams, nor of his wife.

RECLUSE BURNS TO DEATH.

Norfolk, Neb. Oct. 1.—[Special.]—A. H. Deurcy, 70 year old farm recluse, and his only companions for the last 40 years, two dogs, burned to death when he was trapped in his shack today.

FAMILY FUNDS GONE, BABE DIES IN AUTO STALLED ON ROAD

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—County authorities today forwarded to Beloit, Wis., for burial the body of a 5 month old boy, found clutched in his mother's arms as she, her husband, and three children sat at midnight last night in their stalled car along state route 70, several miles south of Rockford.

Attempting to return from a farm in Arkansas to their former home in Beloit despite only a small amount of money and provisions available for the trip, the family had exhausted the last of their gasoline early last evening and had been unable to buy more.

A New Milford, Ill., farmer who was attracted to the car by the mother's sobs and the whimpering of the children near midnight, discovered the tragedy. The baby had died about 5 p. m. The father, Ben Travis, had moved from Beloit to Arkansas last spring in the hope of making a success of a farm there.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"Show Boat" is having navigation difficulties these days. And it's all due to the success of the show. Lanny Ross is in Hollywood making pictures. Mary Lou, that is Muriel Wilson, is in Chicago on her way back east after visiting her radio sweetheart in the movie capital. Annette Hanshaw has left the program for a new show on Columbia. Capt. Henry in the person of Charley Winninger is going into a Broadway show starring Libby Holman.

In the script the members of the Show Boat troupe compose a family more or less. Thus there is some hesitation about throwing outside singers of actors into the program. Temporarily Capt. Henry will be written out of the script because of a "nervous breakdown." "Marie" [Irene Hubbard], his sister, and Tiny Ruffner will probably run the show for the present. And Helen Oelheim, who has long been a member of the chorus, is taking the spots Annette Hanshaw formerly had.

Since Muriel Wilson has just returned from Hollywood, this little story may be of interest; Miss Wilson was going from the studio one evening directly to a theater where she was appearing in her radio rôle. So she did not change from her low cut, bouffant style gown. And because of the billowy effects she did not put on her wrap. Now Muriel is a slim, flashing eyed brunette, but the costume must have fooled the driver who inquired of her escort as he paid the fare, "Wasn't that Mae West?"

Those symphony concerts sponsored by that 16 cylinder motor car maker will return to NBC at 7 p. m. next Sunday evening. Leopold Stokowski will conduct the first concert and Richard Crooks will be soloist. . . . Phil Baker has turned producer. He has in rehersal a new show entitled "Geraniums in My Window." . . . When Ed Wynn returns to the air tonight there will be no more "grand opera" plots. The Fire Chief will "dramatize" a big news story each week. . . . Ozzie Nelson, who will be back on the air Sunday with Joe Penner, is helping coach football at his alma mater, Rutgers, a couple of days each week.

Mary Pickford has picked Gale Gordon, who has been playing "Henry VIII," in the radio series, "English Coronets," as her leading man for her radio dramatic stock company going on the air tomorrow night. . . . The Woman's Symphony orchestra will be on the air from the Ford Gardens at the Fair beginning next Monday over CBS. . . . Fred Hufsmith, tenor, appearing on the Garden concerts with Gladys Swarthout is in Chicago visiting the Fair.

Speaking on behalf of his father's candidacy for probate judge the other night at a meeting in the First Methodist church at Olathe, Kas., Buddy Rogers promised that if his parent were elected he [Buddy] would return to the home town and take out a marriage license. Back in Chicago Buddy points out that he did not promise to use it.

The date for the meeting was decided yesterday morning at a session of the board in the league's newly settled offices in the Farwell building, 664 North Michigan avenue. The 1934 provisional members, 31 in number, attended the meeting and were formally introduced to each board member.

Mrs. Owings also introduced Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, senior adviser of the league, who outlined its history and work. There are none of the current season's debutantes among the provisional members, for, according to the recently amended by-laws, no young woman can be invited into the league until she is 18 and officially "out."

Aside from the business of the morning yesterday the general theme was admiration of the new league offices. Although there are still a few draperies to be hung and vases to be filled, they are practically finished and a tribute to the artistic genius of Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer and Mrs. Owings.

Decorations Give Note of Dignity.

The effect as a whole is one of dignity and business in comparison with the old quarters in the Italian Court building. There are separate offices, with the doors neatly lettered, for each one of the executives who must be downtown almost daily, a specious lounge, and a pleasant foyer.

More than one young matron interested in household decoration has already inquired where Mrs. Cramer and Mrs. Owings found the wall paper used in the foyer. It might be called a tribute to Gen. Balbo and his air squadron, for it reproduces the Italian flag in colorful array.

The pink beige walls of the lounge give an effect of paneling rather than painting. The large fireplace dominating one end of the room and the large comfortable sofas are an invitation to linger.

Opening off the foyer there are also the offices of Mrs. Owings, Miss Helen Bell, director of the league's children's theater; Mrs. Gordon Lang, the placement chairman, and the Chicago Calendar, a league enterprise. Aside from the calendar office, which resembles that of a real newspaper, the others are artistically decorated in red, black, and white.

The powder room deserves mention, for it has especial charm done in powder blue and eggplant. The directoire lighting fixture is the gift of Mrs. Cramer.

Attend Luncheon for Mrs. Belmont.

After the meeting yesterday several of the Junior Leaguers attended the luncheon Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy gave at the Casino for Mrs. August Belmont and to start the work of the newly organized women's division of the Community Fund of Chicago. Miss Margot Atkin, an ex-president of the league, is one of the five women serving on the committee in charge of the women's division this year, and Mrs. Owings, Miss Bell, and Mrs. Robert M. Adams are among those of the league who will work with the division.

It must have pleased them very much to have heard Mrs. Belmont's tribute to the youth of today and especially to the New York Junior league, without whose help and inspiration the work of the women's division of the Community Fund of New York never could have been accomplished, she said.

Women Voters Arrange Concert.

CHILDREN'S BENEFIT LEAGUE NETS $41,000 IN DAY'S TAG DRIVE

Approximately half a million Chicagoans showed their interest in the welfare work of the Chicago Children's Benefit league yesterday by donating $41,000 for yellow star shaped tags on the 26th annual tag day of the organization.

Although the league, which affiliates in its fold 49 children's charities, had set $50,000 as its 1934 goal, Mrs. Wilfred S. Reynolds, president of the organization, last night expressed herself as being highly pleased at the outcome of the day's sales.

"We feel that we have done remarkably well considering that we followed so closely on the heels of the tag days of two other groups," she said.

More than 5,000 women volunteer workers were busy patroling the streets of downtown and suburban Chicago from early morning until sundown, selling the tags to passers-by.

With returns from nine sections of the city still unreported at midnight, the donations for the day were computed at a little less than $41,000, which Mrs. Reynolds expects will be increased today when complete returns are in. Donations aggregating $40,590 were made last year.

The league, non-sectarian and indorsed by the Association of Commerce, includes such agencies as children's wards in hospitals, orphan asylums, schools for the deaf, children's homes, and nurseries. The annual tag day donations are used to supplement their budgets.

LA SALLE STREET'S Ole tells the story of the small boy who saved Hitler's life one day when he was making a speech by hitting the arm of a man with an aimed pistol, deflecting the course of the bullet. The lad was taken to the platform, and Hitler, assuring him that he not only had saved his life but by so doing had performed a valuable service to the nation, asked the boy what wish of his he could grant.

"What is your name?" he inquired.

"Abe Cohen," answered the lad.

Hitler winced, but again inquired the lad's dearest wish. At this the boy hung his head and twisted his cap in his hands, but remained speechless.

"Come, my lad," urged Hitler; "what is your wish? Speak."

"Don't tell my father," pleaded the lad in an embarrassed whisper.

NORMAN F. ELLIOTT, an ex-pusher-arounder in the roller chair division at A Century of Progress tells of the roller chair guide who had as patron a Boston gentleman who seemed to feel he was doing the Fair a favor by attending it.

"I say, boy, what's that white building over there?" he asked.

"That's the Hall of Religion, sir," replied the guide.

"Omigod!" the passenger exclaimed.

"Quite so, sir!" answered the guide after a moment's pause.

A PROPERTY owner of Dearborn street, just north of Maple, obviously was not satisfied with the customary sign reading "Grass" or "Keep Off the Grass." The sign on the grass plot at that location reads, "Get Along, Little Doggie."

OCCASIONALLY when we print a story we learn later that it was the very story that a long dead wit used to tell Mrs. Leslie Carter in her youth. It is, then, with some hesitation that we offer the story of the Mrs. Miller who died and had conversation with St. Peter at the door of heaven.

"I'd like to join my husband, Mr. Miller," she announced.

"Madame, we have a great many Millers here. Would you be so kind as to identify him further," St. Peter answered.

"His first name is Tom," enlarged Mrs. Miller.

St. Peter still looked doubtful and pointed out that, as there was a large section in heaven devoted to Tom Millers, he would have to have further identification.

"Can you tell us something more to help us identify him?" he asked.

Mrs. Miller thought for a moment, then murmured that on his deathbed her spouse had told her that if, after his passing, she even so much as looked at another man he would turn over in his grave. As she said this, a light broke on the face of St. Peter, and he interrupted to to say:

Director of Louvre Visions Chicago as Art Center of U. S.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 1.—(AP)—When America reaches artistic maturity, Chicago is more likely to be the great artistic center than New York, in the opinion of Paul Jamot, director of painting of the Louvre, Paris, and himself an artist.

He is superintending the packing of paintings lent by the Louvre to the palace of the Legion of Honor here.

New York, he said, was "impressive and amazing." San Francisco was "beautiful in landscape and setting," but Chicago had "the most personality." He went on:

"In Europe there is a prejudice against Chicago. Always with Chicago is associated the thought of gangsters and the unpleasant abattoirs of the stockyards. But when I was there the gangsters seemed to be pretty well spread out, and as for the stockyards, it is after all quite good to make hams and bacon.

"The Art institute there is marvelous. Lake Michigan is beautiful, and the city is vital, young, creative. It may well be that in the future Chicago in the heart of your middle west will be your national art and cultural center."

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Every time that the San Carlo company opens a new season in Chicago there is a new shock of surprise about it. The company is inclined to concentrate its advertising upon the fact that its highest priced seats cost no more than one dollar. The surprise is that there is nothing in the least approaching the bargain counter or shopworn about its performances. "Aïda," with which it once again greeted the Chicago public, or as much of the public as could crowd into the Auditorium last night, would have been a good performance under the old deal scheme of prices.

I admit in advance everything that can be alleged against the organization. I will put up no argument against the statement that the scenery was constructed to ride in baggage cars and not to remain built into one particular theater; that the orchestra numbered less than ninety-eight, or whatever number is considered the ideal for "Aïda" performances; that the trumpeters in the triumph scene were four and not six; that the casting of the principals was designed not upon European reputations but upon individual ability. But I will maintain with what energy I have that this performance had a spirit and an ideal that gave it a place in the front rank of performances.

You, if you were there—there were hundreds of you who asked and were denied admission—will remember the pace and energy that Conductor Peroni gave to principals, orchestra, and chorus, the values that he put upon accent, the dramatic climax that he invoked through nothing more important than a pause of exactly the right length. There were times when some of us found ourselves catching our breaths when what had happened was that Mr. Peroni had stopped the performance for one, two, three, perhaps four beats, and then taken it up with renewed vigor. He knows his scores. He also knows his theater.

When "Aïde" is given again you will be ready to applaud Miss Saroya once more, not only for the sheer caressing loveliness of her voice but for the wistful tragedy that she puts into both singing and demeanor. She is the Aïda that you are to remember. And Mr. Lindi, the Scandinavian tenor who has as much as possible Italianized his name, is another to cherish. He is an old operatic acquaintance, but even in the less than a year since he was last in Chicago he has improved in voice and manner to the point where pleasure in his acquaintance becomes pride. He was as much of a star as Miss Saroya, which means considerable. And you will find that Mostyn Thomas, who sang here a year ago in concert, is an opera singer worth earnest attention, with a fine voice full of dramatic undercurrents.

The San Carlo's ballet is likewise something of note. In the triumph scene there were dancers of bobolink black and white, plus an intentional touch of epidermis, and the principals, Mlle. Arlova and Mr. Prideaux in gold and silver paint, plus what was perhaps an unintentional touch of epidermis. The dance was colorful, well grouped and designed, and it made one of the many hits of the evening.

The San Carlo company is now on its twenty-fifth anniversary tour. Tonight there will be another anniversary, for in it Leon Rothier will appear as Mephistopheles in Gounod's "Faust" and thereby celebrate the thirty-fifth anniversary of his début on the operatic stage. His first appearance was as Jupiter in another Gounod opera, "Philemon and Baucis," at the Paris Opera-Comique. With him tonight will be Mary McCormic as Marguerite, Edward Molitore as Faust, and Mario Valle as Valentine.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Doesn't she look exalted? So would you if you'd just become acquainted with a new and fascinating perfume from Paris.

An interlude in the old south, suh, set us back in our work of digging up the newest and the nobbiest for you but you'll undoubtedly forgive us when you locate our first find, an unforgettable perfume not long off the boat from Paris. It's too swish for words.

We warn you that it's the been-around type, plenty sophisticated and somewhat dazzling. But it doesn't remind you of the old time movie star trying to be a vampire, just oozing ardor. It's much too smart for such obviousness.

It's a wow in its way. Men like it because it isn't heavy and its just spicy enough for them to think it's sweet, which it emphatically isn't. They simply don't know about such things.

The crisp young business woman can use it sparingly during the day and with a somewhat heavier hand when she slides into a dinner gown. It's all right, too, for the mature woman who is stamped with distinction, but it just wouldn't be right for the sort of woman who won't permit her husband to smoke in the house or the one who thinks that lavender is just about as daring as any scent should be. Like all perfumes it has pretty definite limitations, but when it comes to types it will suit perfectly.

If it's yours you're lucky, because there are few scents like it and it's a thrilling one. At the first sniff it may seem a bit strong, but it isn't, and it's one of the most lasting perfumes we've found in a long time.

With this, as with most, it's best to apply it only to the flesh or to those costume accents which are tubbed frequently, such as handkerchiefs, washable collars and cuffs or lingerie, although it does take beautifully to furs.

By the way, it's considered tremendously clever or soulful or something to apply a tiny bit of your favorite scent to your eyelids. Try this next time you want to make your wooer swoon!

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

When clothes are taken out and are found to be "moth eaten," people often find moths among the garments. However, nobody ever saw a moth eating the clothes. Moths have no teeth and usually do not eat anything during their lifetime. It is the larval form which eats clothes. Moths lay eggs among clothes and the eggs hatch into the larvæ (forms) which feed upon the cloth. Finally the larvæ grow fat and spin cocoons in which they sleep and become changed into moths.

The Cafe Suit Is Here, Festive and Decorative

Flattering Collar of Fur Frames the Face.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Some of the most decorative and festive looking suits for dress parade have been unpacked—new things with plenty of dash, even a bit of daring in the slit skirts, and with all kinds of possibilities as to where one might wear them. They have been christened "café suits," and have been designed for dinner and dancing after 6 o'clock. The outstanding difference between these and any of the other 1934 models that are called suits is the long, slinky silhouette, the elegance of the materials, and huge flattering fur collars that frame the face.

Most of them are of velvet, some with highlights and others made of stunning dull black, the splendor found in the blouses and blouse tops. If you like blue, you'll fall for the suit with a long, long tunic top of azure blue shot with silver, with the long slit skirt of black velvet to match the very long coat that fits snugly and boasts wide revers and collar of white fur.

Another stunner is made with a shorter coat, with an angelic top of narrow striped metallic brocade, the background dull white, the stripes silver gilt. This suit has a coat that ties trickily into position at the neckline. Bands of the black slip through slits in the white fur collar and tie into a bow down the chest. Other blouse contrasts can be found in gleaming colorful brocades and lamés. They are separate from the skirt so that you can substitute any other blouse that you may like.

Still other ensembles are made with a long dress and the matching velvet jacket. Each looks like a suit, with the jacket on, but is a particularly good find as a dance dress alone, with short sleeves, deep slits either at front or back of the bodice top with sparkling tops of metal cloth or winding sashes or belts of high colored crêpe or the metal cloth.

Café suits are very different from anything you have seen; they are going fast. Better grab one while they are new.

BLAZING GUNS

By WILLIAM MacLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Landis inherited the Lazy B ranch from her uncle. It adjoins the Circle 3 T ranch, owned by Chet Radbourne, powerful boss in the country and Mary's legal guardian. He has been stealing Mary's cattle and trying to force her to marry him. To escape his tyranny Mary marries Cole Sanborn, fearless young outlaw and suspected train robber, within an hour after meeting him. The marriage is one in name only, giving them both better advantage to fight against their common enemy. Jordan, one of Chet's men, captures Mary and sends her back to Circle 3 T. Cole, unaware of Mary's plight, rides into Jonesboro with Rusty Hunter, one of his trusted men. He gets Judge Fairley to terminate Chet's guardianship over Mary. Cole kills Jordan in self-defense and is exonerated. Chet sends Slim Calhoun, a good looking young outlaw, to ride the ranch with Mary. After a run-in with Chet and Haskell Chet's foreman, Slim leaves the Circle 3 T and takes a letter from Mary to Cole, who accepts Slim as a recruit. By a trick, Cole outwits Chet's men, among them Gray Shirt, and captures Lazy B ranch without bloodshed. He returns Chet's men to him, making Chet the laughing stock of the country. Cole makes Chet realize public opinion will be against him if he harms Mary—a woman. Even Gray Shirt, the hired killer, deserts Chet because of his tactics. Mary worries when she realizes she is safe, but her husband—though in name only—is in danger.

INSTALMENT XXXII.

A MOMENT OF TRIUMPH.

Cole looked at Mary, smiling. "I've been in trouble ever since I landed in this country."

"You win the battle, then I get all the rewards," she told him reproachfully.

She felt his gaze burning into her. It seemed a long time before it shifted to the dying light on the distant hills. Night was dropping down over the valley. Soon it would envelop them.

"How do you know what rewards I get?" he asked, his voice studiedly light and casual.

"The Lazy B—and the cattle. I don't suppose you would let me divide them."

"I reckon not."

"Then you haven't anything to gain."

"I'll tell you some day what I have to gain," he said, still carelessly. "Or else I won't."

Mary heard him, with a fluttering heart beating against her ribs. This might mean nothing, or it might mean a great deal. She did not want him to explain his words, not yet at least. The barriers in her soul, defenses built as safeguards against the emotion he always stirred in her, were falling far too fast. She was a fool, of course, she told herself accusingly. Never for an instant had he broken the compact made the day of their marriage. He seemed to be cased in hard chill steel. Yet when he looked at her flashes burned her bosom. Always she had been highheaded and independent, but when she was with him her arrogant will melted into his. She had made him promise not to break faith. It had not been necessary, she felt then, to make herself do the same.

"You'll be back before you leave town," Mary said to her husband.

She had to say something, for silence was too significant.

"Is that a riddle?" she asked, after she was sure of her voice.

"I'll say this now, no more. I've fooled away my time, with nothing worth while to live for. You know what my reputation is. I earned it, partly at least. Now I am at work on a good job, for others as well as myself. That's something, don't you reckon?"

"Yes," she said. "That's a lot."

A wild and primitive joy beat a drum in her.

The return of Sanborn to Jonesboro was almost a triumphal procession. Men had watched him go, the opinion strong in them that he was leading a forlorn hope and would probably never come back. Now, within twelve hours, he was leading his victorious band up Main street, beside him the lovely girl whose plight had transformed this private war from a sordid feud to a thrilling romance. During that time Cole had captured more than half of Radbourne's men, had dragged them back to the den of the old fox, had reclaimed his wife, and was bringing to town with him the spoils of battle in the form of the mounts and the weapons of the gunmen he had taken.

This was the most amazing episode that had occurred in Jonesboro's turbulent life! If Sanborn had fought a bloody battle and won, he would have found a divided sentiment. Many good citizens would have felt the feud was lawless, and that one gang of ruffians had defeated another. But to have captured the enemy without firing a shot, to have had the Circle 3 T men completely in his power, to have freed them unharmed after making them ridiculous—this was a triumph approved by all the good people of the county seat.

Preston and Lutz had brought the incredible story to town. It had swept like wildfire from house to house. Now men, women, and children lined the road to see the victors. Cole rode straightbacked, imperturbable and grim, nodding now and again to some one he recognized.

But Mary was all smiles. When a good old deacon of the church called to her a fervent "God bless you!" she waved a hand at him gaily. It did not occur to her that she supplied the element which made this dramatic entry romantic. Mary loved it all. She felt the campaign was won, an illusion Cole did not share for an instant. But he felt it wise to make the occasion as impressive as possible.

"Will some one get Jim Poston the blacksmith and tell him to open up for business?" he asked an acquaintance. "I'll be round at his shop in ten minutes."

He ordered the saddled but riderless horses driven to the Longhorn corral. "Stick together, boys, and meet me in ten minutes at the blacksmith shop. Bring all the Circle 3 T guns with you.

Cole and Mary rode to the residence of Hal Peters. The lawyer was just returning with his wife. They had been down to Main street.

"Quite a Roman triumph," Peters said dryly. "All it needed was Radbourne in chains at your chariot wheels."

They could still hear the pop of revolvers celebrating the event.

He lifted Mary from the saddle.

"We are so glad you're back. We are hoping you will come to our home and spend a long visit, Mary," the lawyer's wife said.

Mary loved her for her gracious kindness. "If you are sure I won't be a nuisance," she said, and added impulsively: "I won't ever forget how good you are to me."

"Nonsense," the older woman said at once. "It will be good for us, as it was before, to have a young person in the house to brighten it." She spoke to Cole, offering her hand. "Mr. Peters tells me he has hopes that you will save this county from the corrupt ring that has run it so long."

"I'll try to help him do that," Cole answered, with his swift rare smile.

"We'll all have to do our part," the attorney said. "I think from what I hear folks say that you have them on the run. I'll dig up some evidence of their corruption and worry them some more. No trouble to find traces of crookedness. It is all over the place."

Cole excused himself. "Have to get back to the boys," he said. "This show isn't quite over."

"Think I'll go along with you," Peters said.

"You'll be back before you leave town," Mary said in a low voice to her husband.

"I'll be back," he promised.

Sanborn led the horses back to Main street, the lank lawyer walking by his side. They moved down between the false front buildings to the blacksmith shop. Several hundred people were gathered in front of it, most of them men. A cheer greeted Cole. He paid no attention to it.

"Poston is inside, and we've brought the guns," Slim said. "What you aiming to do with them?"

Within fifteen minutes each rifle and revolver had been put on the anvil and its usefulness ended by heavy blows from the blacksmith's hammer.

The spectators approved. They shouted encouragement.

"You'll do to take along, Cole. . . . Show Chet he can't cut it when he hatches up a fuss and lays it on yore lap. . . . We're with you, boy. We'll show his slit eyed sons of guns they can't bullypuss this country."

Cole understood that this enthusiasm would not last. These men would go home and get to wondering if, after all, Radbourne would not strike back at his foe swiftly and mercilessly. Tomorrow they would be much more careful in the expression of their opinions. They would remember that Chet had spies in town who reported to him all that went on.

After the guns had been smashed Cole paid a visit to the office of the Boone County Beacon. Tim Alderson was setting type on an editorial, composing it as he went along.

Butchers Aid Cookery with New Meat Cuts

BY MARY MEADE.

Every once in a while some bright and brainy butcher begins playing with his knife and creates, often to his own great surprise, a new cut of meat which proceeds to take the sisterhood of cooks by storm.

Within the last few years quite a few of these pleasant little surprises have happened to us. How many of them do you know?

Many of the new cuts are being boned to help out the carver. For instance, you remember all those mean, odd-shaped bones around which we used to steer when serving a shoulder of lamb? These days, if you select your butcher wisely, you may swing home with the new cushion style of lamb shoulder, from which the bones have been removed, leaving a cavity which teases to be filled with savory bread stuffing, then sewed up at its edges or skewered securely. And notice what happens. As the roast heats, the dressing expands, plumping out the shoulder sides into the shape of a pillow, thus the "cushion style." This neat roast is an admirable one for slicing. Serve it hot.

But one can't always have frosting. For instance, when these roasts and pot roasts are cut smaller they usually come to us without their usual outside covering of fat. Be sure then that they are supplied with outside coverings of back fat wrapped around them. The especially lean pieces should also be larded with strips of fat run through their lean. The added fat, we find, adds to the juiciness and tenderness of the meat.

The butterfly pork chop is another new little number to win applause. It's made from double slices of boned loin. The butcher cuts the first slice only partly through, so that the two slices may be opened out, giving the chop the look of a butterfly. Braising is the answer to the cooking question for these fluttery chops. Brown them first on both sides in a sizzling hot skillet. Turn down the heat and add a very little water. Cover the skillet tightly and cook until tender at simmering heat. Or if it's to be an oven dinner simply use the top burner for the browning, then cook the chops the remainder of the time in the closed skillet in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.).

There's nothing startlingly new about a crown roast of pork, but it might like to be remembered a bit more often when special "swank" is the thing. So here's a trick to remember about pork crowns. At the meat shop all the tissue is removed from the rib ends. Roasting will cause a general burning up if these points are not protected. Therefore wrap them with strips of bacon or salt pork. Or the newest trick is to perform a flip-flop and roast the crown upside down, letting the fat melt down comfortingly over the bones to keep them moist. Your crown will need a moderately slow oven (300 to 325 degrees F.), with about thirty minutes' baking allowed per pound.

Restaurant Curse Often Is Worry of Bachelorhood

BY DORIS BLAKE.

There comes a pause in the bachelor's occupation with bachelorhood when he wonders if a continued series of home cooked meals wouldn't be more agreeable than restaurant dining.

Anyway, that's Harmon's current state of mind. But where's the girl to cater lovingly and efficiently to his thirty-five year old needs? Many bachelors have a flock of girls just waiting around for the restaurant boredom. But not Harmon. He has been too busy building up a business to bother with women. Now with the business flourishing, money to spend on a girl and domestic establishment, he wishes he had taken a little more interest in the sex that matters when marriage looms.

"I'm all fed up on restaurants and hotel life. Now, I want a place of my own. But I don't know how to go about getting acquainted. I know few women and I wouldn't know what to say to one if she did give me the 'come on.'"

We wouldn't worry much, Harmon, about what to say to the girl when you get her. She will attend to that. Once it is known that you have a flourishing business and designs on matrimony and you're presentable and of good character, the girl will take care of the rest. Anyway, she will help you along. It's how to get yourself in circulation that is your problem. Not much of a one, however, providing your bachelorhood is not responsible for dreams of a girl of such dazzling proportions that she doesn't inhabit the earth. You lone wolf bachelors are notorious for dreaming the impossible. You haven't been around women enough to know us for the faulty beings, the far from perfect angels we are. But we're good company, you know, and rather necessary to the fulfilment of a rounded out life.

Now, if you'd shed the dreams and are willing to take pot luck as your benedict brothers have done, you will have little trouble getting your girl. Just don't think she lives at the other end of the town or in quite another social stratum where you'll never meet her. You must know some women. They must have sisters or cousins or women friends. You know some men. They have female relatives and acquaintances. Just let word get out that you're tired of bachelorhood and it won't be long before you have your legs under your own dining room table.

For Beauty of Face, Observe Foot Comforts

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

If such bodily ills as rheumatism, arthritis, sciatica, and so on, can be relieved by foot treatment, why not beauty ills, too? In a current monthly magazine there is presented a forceful supply of evidence in relation to the work of the Canadian foot manipulating wizard, Dr. Locke, to impress one with the belief that imperfect feet cut up agonizing didoes with the system. So why not feet first in face care, as the new school of facial beauty is propagandizing?

Certainly one can emerge from a beauty salon a perfect exhibit of massage and makeup benefit. But if her feet hurt and she walks on them a few blocks, the lines are back again in no time.

The author of the article reports Dr. Locke's rejoinder to a patient who argued that it was her shoulder, not her feet, that hurt. "I know. But if you step on a dog's tail, which end of him yelps?"

The face surely yelps if some one steps on a pet toe. It looks pained if the arches fall. If the muscles of the feet are bound too tightly or are strained, a foot specialist can tell at a glance that all is not well with the pedal extremities. A shoe man, a factor in the corrective shoe manufacturing business, invited me to sit in one day and study faces as they entered and exited from his shop. It was comical as well as miraculous the change noticed in certain of the faces with the relief resulting from more comfortable shoes. One woman noticeably performed the magic of shedding a few good years right there and then. She entered looking so tired, worn, unhappy. She turned with a beaming smile on her way out. All of which indicates how darned important to looks is the condition of those propellers of yours.

If arches need bolstering up, my advice would be to consult with an orthopedic specialist. In large cities, there are clinics operated for foot relief at little cost to the patient. Anyway, do something about the feet and getting them into walkable, livable, enjoyable shoes. Otherwise there isn't much use in investing in beauty lotions, massages, and so on.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Wait a While for Marriage.

"Dear Miss Blake: My boy friend and I are in love and both working. I am nineteen and he twenty-two. Are we too young to get married?

"BROWN EYES."

It might be advisable to wait another year or so before you think of marriage, Brown Eyes. 'Twill be time enough then, and in the meantime you may both make your plans with that in view.

Small Prices Reported at Ayer Auction

"Lady in a Black Gown" Brings $860.

"Portrait of a Lady in a Black Gown," an oil by Hans Holbein, Dutch painter and dated 1530, sold for $860 in a public auction at the Grant Art Galleries, 25 South Wabash avenue, yesterday.

The portrait, said to be the only Holbein ever to be offered at public auction with unreserved price, was bought by Mrs. Robert Fyfe. It, with 86 other paintings, etchings, drawings, and prints sold yesterday, was the property of the late Edward E. Ayer, art collector and philanthropist.

Framed in gold leaf, with richly carved corners, the 23 by 17 inch painting was in excellent condition. Bidding started at $500. At one time, it was said, the picture was valued at $10,000.

Another object, for which Mr. Ayer paid $10,000 in 1894, was sold for $225 to J. H. Jacobson. This was a framed miniature painting, "Head of St. Francis," by Guido Reni, on the back of which was an original etching representing the River Reno. Mr. Ayer purchased the piece from the S. E. Gross collection in 1894. In December of that year it was accepted by the Chicago Art institute, of which Mr. Ayer was a trustee, for exhibition.

Other pieces went for equally small sums. A sixteenth century Byzantine ikon went for $8, twelfth century illuminated Missal pages for $11, and "Italian Girl," by E. Vedder, for $90. Some 400 sets of rare and beautiful linen from the Ayer mansion at 2 Banks court and "The Oaks" at Lake Geneva also were sold.

Among the bidders yesterday were Mrs. Robert Harvey, Mrs. John B. Drake, Mrs. John Barnes, Mrs. Tom Howell, Mrs. Philo Otis, Mrs. J. E. Jenkins, George A. Chapman, John Cuneo, C. S. Garland, and the Newberry library. The sale will be continued at 1 p. m. today, at which the Ayer table and decorative glassware will be offered.

Mrs. Frederic W. Upham presided. Plans for a weekly study class in appreciation of symphony music were announced by Mrs. Bradley Downing.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Mrs. P. is the mother of five boys, 13, twins 10, 5 and 2 years of age. A widow, she is dependent upon a relief organization for livelihood. She has just undergone her sixth operation and is still weak and sickly and in need of warm clothing, size 46 or 48. The youngsters also need apparel.

Alix's Loose Coat Tied with Stout Lether Thongs

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Loose coats are not so new in silhouette that they form any kind of striking novelty. The Paris dressmakers, however, contrive to make them look so different that no last season's coat can make the grade of chic though it be identical in shape. There is Schiaparelli's loose coat made from a gay colored traveling blanket as one example, and there is Alix's loose coat with a separate panel front, tied to the body by lether thongs, and lined with soft orange wool. It is illustrated.

The material is a velvet jersey in darkest blue. The panel in front is now sewed to the body of the coat except at the top, where it makes the wrap-over closing. Where the six lether thongs tie the coat they have folded over the edges to show the orange lining. The small round collar is bound with lether thongs also.

A dark blue velvet jersey dress with drooping shoulder seams and big sleeves goes under this coat. It has a lether belt shaped a lot like a picket fence and a stream-line bias cut skirt.

Junior League Fall Meeting to Be Oct. 22

Provisional Members Are Presented to Board.

Illinois League of Women voters is to have the evening of Oct. 29 at Orchestra hall. Albert Spalding, the violinist, who was born in Chicago, is to give the program. Already Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Gerhardt F. Meyne have made plans for dinner and box parties. Mrs. Charles H. Wacker is the general chairman of the event. Mrs. Frank P. Hixon is president of the league.

At dinner this evening at their Astor street apartment Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard will entertain for four eastern visitors—the Hunter Marstons of New York City and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Johnston of Baltimore. The Marstons and the Johnstons arrived in Chicago on Sunday to be the house guests of Mrs. George R. Nichols, their summer neighbor at Watch Hill, R. I. Mrs. Nichols is not planning any elaborate entertaining for her guests since they prefer to have most of their time free for A Century of Progress. The Johnstons and the Marstons will be here all of this week. The Hibbards have a summer home at Watch Hill also.

Arts Club Opens Season Today.

The attractive rooms of the Arts club will buzz with conversation and the clatter of silver and china this afternoon between 4 and 6 o'clock, for the first tea of the season is being held then and it will be the occasion for many of the members to see each other for the first time since early in the summer. The restaurant service of luncheon and tea will be resumed tomorrow.

Le Cercle Français will hold its first meeting of the season this afternoon in its rooms in the Fine Arts building. M. Leon Rothier will talk and Mrs. Harold G. Sperling, the new president, will preside. Mme. Rene Weiller, wife of the French consul, and Mrs. Jefferson Jackson, who has just returned from a summer in Italy, will pour.

By telephone Rear Admiral and Mrs. Wat T. Cluverius are issuing invitations for a reception from 4:30 to 6:30 next Monday afternoon in the lounge in the Federal building at A Century of Progress. The party will be one of the official closing events of the Fair.

The Sangston Hetflers, who had a house at Lake Geneva all summer, returned to their residence on Hawthorne place yesterday. The Albert F. Madleners are among those who are keeping their houses on the lake open through this month. Last weekend was one of the gayest of the season at Lake Geneva for the annual harvest home party of the Country club was given. The Madleners had a party of 28; the Philip Starcks entertained 15; the Ralph Ishams had 12 guests, and the Henry H. Porters had 8.

Will Spend Winter in Lake Forest.

The John A. Chapman family will be spending the winter in their Lake Forest house instead of in an apartment on Lake Shore drive. Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. McBride, who have occupied the Chapmans' house for the last two years, are moving into the Duncan Hodges' house on Westminster road at the end of this month. The Stephen V. Hortons are others who have reversed the usual direction of migration for this part of the year and have gone from town out to the country, where they will spend the winter in Lake Forest with the former Betty Histed's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Roland Histed.

The Francis Peabody Butlers and their debutante daughter, Miss Deborah Butler, are settled at the Ambassador hotel until after the Christmas holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Pritchard have moved into their new apartment at 229 Lake Shore drive and, having just completed a trip to Canada, they will remain at home for a few months anyway.

The Robert J. Dunhams have returned from a summer in California.

Another visitor in Lake Forest is Mrs. Earle H. Reynolds who used to live here. She is staying at the Deerpath Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr. have returned from a visit of a month with his mother at her summer home at Sugar Hill, N. H. Mrs. Winterbotham Sr. is remaining in the White mountains until later in the fall.

Jean Dunbar Decides on College Career.

Miss Jean Dunbar, daughter of the David O. Dunbars, will not be a debutante this winter for she has decided to pursue a college career instead and has gone to Wellesley.

Charles H. Chadwick has gone to New York to meet Mrs. Chadwick who sailed last Saturday from France. They are expected in Chicago next Sunday or Monday.

Miss Ethel Johnston and her brother, Hulburd Johnston, moved into town yesterday to their State street home after spending the summer in Lake Forest. Another debutante, Miss Mary Elizabeth Reid, has returned to Chicago with her parents, the Bryan S. Reids, who had a house in Lake Forest for the warm weather months. The Reids are on Astor street.

Mr. and Mrs. George Henry High moved into an apartment at the Ambassador East hotel yesterday.

Richard A. Boaler of East Division street sailed recently from New York on the Saturnia for a Mediterranean cruise. He will spend several weeks in Italy, Switzerland, and France after the cruise.

Betty Forgan to Be Attendant at Wedding.

Miss Betty Forgan, debutante daughter of the Robert D. Forgans of Highland Park, will go to Boston Oct. 17 to be maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Rose Gordon Stearns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jenkins of Brookline, Mass., to George Newton Proctor III., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Newton Proctor of Winchester, Mass., which will take place on Oct. 20. Miss Forgan and Miss Stearns were schoolmates at Dobbs Ferry.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Holmes of Highland Park, with their six children, have left to spend the winter in Ann Arbor, Mich. With five members of the family studying at the University of Michigan, it seemed simpler to live there than to commute, although the whole family will return to Highland Park for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Samuel S. Holmes Jr., who started his college career at Princeton and then transferred to Kenyon college, is entered this fall at Michigan, where his younger brother, Kenneth, has been studying. The third son, Russell, is entering Michigan. The elder daughter, Miss Jane Holmes, will take some special courses there, while the younger girl, Alice, will attend the school of music. The youngest son, David, is in high school.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Sidley and the junior William P. Sidleys and their children have gone to California to settle the younger Sidleys and their family in a house in Santa Barbara, where they will spend the winter. Mr. Sidley Sr. will return to Chicago this week, and his wife will follow next week.

Now that the Ronald Chinnocks have an interesting addition to their household, a lively young man known as "Sandy," they have moved into an apartment of their own at 4642 Woodlawn avenue. They have been making their home with Mrs. Chinnock's mother, Mrs. Marvin Farr, a block farther south on Woodlawn avenue.

Miss Susan Follansbee, daughter of the Mitchell Follansbees, will spend the fall teaching at the North Shore Country Day school and then come in town at the semester to take a position on the staf of the Francis Parker school.

An interesting visitor in Chicago this week is Knud Valdemar Hansen of Denmark, a member of the editorial staf of Berlingske Tidende, Copenhagen newspaper. Miss Herma Clark, who met Mr. Hansen last summer while she was traveling aboard, is entertaining at luncheon for him this noon at the Cordon club. Among Miss Clark's guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Lafin of Lake Forest.

Quirt and Flagg Jousting Again in 'East River'

Each Strives to Outsmart Other and Steal Scene.

McLaglen Ill

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Victor McLaglen was removed to Hollywood hospital today while production on his part of a picture about New York tunnel builders was postponed for a week. Dr. H. J. Strathearn said McLaglen's bad cold had been aggravated by spending working hours in a dark and damp replica of an under river subway with water seeping about the actors part of the time. His illness is diagnosed as laryngitis.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 1. — [Special.] —It's always interesting to watch Eddie Lowe and Victor McLaglen in a film together, for if Eddie isn't trying, half in fun and half in earnest, to outsmart his big pal and steal the scene it's a dull day indeed. When their picture is directed by their old director, Raoul Walsh, who brought both to their popularity as Quirt and Flagg in "What Price Glory," you can be sure the set will be lively.

Lowe and McLaglen were working in a scene with Marjorie Rambeau, Charlie Bickford, George Walsh, Raoul's brother, and a roomful of stony faced he man types in "East River" yesterday at Fox's. The scene represented a combination barroom and cheap restaurant operated by Marjorie, near the head of one of the tunnel shafts where the construction gangs gathered in their off time from under-river work in the New York bore.

McLaglen, Marjorie and an actor playing a newspaper reporter were sitting around a barroom table. Lowe was standing beside the table. Charlie Bickford, McLaglen's rival tunnel digging foreman, burst into the barroom to demand a bet on which gang would reach the center of the river first.

While McLaglen's jaw began to protrude in Bickford's direction, Lowe teetered a little on the back of a chair which he had braced against the small of his back, and this seemingly trivial movement may draw the audiences' attention to Lowe instead of the tense moment between McLaglen and Bickford when shown on the screen. Lowe's maneuver lasted only a moment, but it may have lasted long enough to score another point for Quirt in his long scene stealing feud with Flagg.

In this film Lowe, for once, is not named Quirt and McLaglen is not Flagg and the two do not "sez you" each other all through the picture.

But it wouldn't be a Lowe-McLaglen picture if Eddie Lowe were not wearing a straight face while trying to steal some of McLaglen's starring opportunity away from the big fellow.

Another interesting personage on the Lowe and McLaglen set, his nose bearing the dent of some past blow and his old black felt hat placing him in character among the roughly dressed and burly actors, was Frank Fowler, ex-Massachusetts Tech student, ex-river tunnel foreman, ex-newspaper reporter, and now, under the name of Borden Chase, exponent of tunnel digging realism for the story he wrote out of his own experience. Chase turned out the story in collaboration with Edward J. Doherty and is following through as script adapter, dialog improvisor and technical director.

Eldest Girl Too Often Made the Family Drudge

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"I think it's wonderful to be one of a big family. I wish I had more than one baby," said a young mother one evening as a friendly foursome sat cozily around the fire and the rain drummed on the roof.

"Ellen only thinks that because she's an only child herself. She has all sorts of glamorous ideas about life in a large family. Now I'm one of a large family myself and I think being an only child is swell," said Ellen's husband.

"Well, I think none is best of all," said their guest, holding her head a trifle defiantly as all eyes turned on her in surprise.

"Why do you think that?" at last came from the young woman named Ellen.

"Because I brought up four younger sisters and brothers. I've always had family cares and even now, when Bob and I have been married only six months, I still have some family around my neck. I feel as if I couldn't stand any more of it."

Which last passionate expression of opinion holds a warning to mothers of large families. Too often the oldest child becomes the drudge of the family, though not if the oldest child is a son instead of a daughter. Because housework and tending babies is women's work, the boys usually go scot free in such circumstances and the oldest daughter bears the brunt of it all, with the result that she experiences only the drudgery and hard work that go with having children and grows to feel that that is all there is to it. Many an oldest daughter in a large family has had the edge taken off of motherhood and housekeeping by being allowed to take too much work and responsibility upon her shoulders.

This is not fair. Mothers should protect their eldest daughters.

Other Schools Force U. of C. to Restore Old Grading System

Forced by requirements of other institutions of learning, the University of Chicago this year has retrogressed in its new plan of education to the extent of reinstating the system of grading. An announcement from the dean of students' office yesterday stated that the old system of grading results aphabetically "A-B-C-D-E-F" has supplanted the plan used for four years of only two marks: "S"—satisfactory, and "U"—unsatisfactory.

The announcement stated that students transferring to other universities were handicapped. This had been inaugurated in an attempt to make education the sole end of academic effort, without a system of awards. The alphabetical marks will be given at the end of quarterly examinations.

SOME SLAM BIDDING.

Let us give the opening no trump bidder the following hand:

Sp. A Q x	Di. K Q x
Ht. A J x	Cl. K 10 x x

and assume that his partner responds with three hearts. Now the opening bidder has the material for a response of four hearts:

[a] he has two aces, as this rebid affirms;

[b] he has four primary tricks—that is to say, he has a clear half trick in primary form as a reserve value on which to accept and encourage the slam development.

[c] he has all the support for hearts which was implied provisionally by his opening bid of one no trump; his hand is sound and normal and without a weak spot.

I have given this hand the jack of hearts because I wished to use a typical sound no trump hand. Even if the heart holding were only A x x, one should not back down from the slam on the bidding which we will consider, as the chance of losing a heart trick is remote. Even if that suit is adversely held 4-1, there is the chance of the jack dropping and of one partner holding the ten; or of being able to trap the jack by means of the ten.

A Jump Take-out.

Partner's response is three hearts, to which you reply with four hearts. If the responding hand holds

Sp. K x	Di. A J x
Ht. K Q 10 9 x	Cl. Q J x

he knows from your bid that there is an ace against the partnership; consequently he can locate in your hand one trick in hearts, one in diamonds; the other two tricks must be either A-Q of spades and king of clubs, or A-K of clubs and a protective holding such as Q J x x in spades, though on your bidding it is likely that you have a card higher than the queen in each suit. In short, with an ace missing your four tricks must be such that the missing ace should be the only loser. Responder's bid is six hearts, which I think the opener should take to six no trumps in view of his ten-ace holdings in the black suits. Since both partners know there is an ace against them, there is no question of going on to seven.

When Responder Can Decide on Grand Slam.

With two aces and reserve values in the responding hand, as

Sp. x x	Di. A Q x
Ht. K Q 10 x x	Cl. A Q x

the bidding would go as before up to four hearts by opener, who I assume to hold the same cards as before. Now the responding hand has the scent of a grand slam in his nostrils. All four aces are located, opener's four tricks must be composed of the exact high cards we know him to hold, unless conceivably he is even stronger by virtue of A-K of spades. He can only have one trick in each red suit and a half in clubs, so his spades are at least A-Q. At this point the responder can make a very constructive bid for grand slam purposes—the small slam is in no doubt whatever, but there is the spade finesse to consider for grand slam.

A Brilliant Constructive Rebid.

If he can positively know that his own losing spade can be discarded, he need no longer worry about a finesse, and can then see that the only risk is a loser in hearts on a 4-1 or 5-0 adverse holding, assuming that opener lacks the jack. Responder should bid five clubs. If partner can raise that suit, not knowing just why the bid is made, then he has four to the king or king jack, and the grand slam is home.

In reply to five clubs, opener should bid six clubs. Knowing the small slam is safe, or appears to his partner to be safe, in hearts or no trumps, he must realize that the partner has an urgent reason for finding out something about clubs. It may denote a second long suit in his hand, it may be a cue bid. His not to reason why, but only to obey and supply the information demanded. Over six clubs, responder should, in a rubber play, bid seven hearts. Opener must pass, not being quite certain whether the five-club bid showed a real suit or a single ace or a void. In match point play, I think South should bid seven no trumps over six clubs, knowing that his partner has not the means of doing so over seven hearts.

BUROCRATS TRICK THOSE WHO SELL DROUTH CATTLE

Farmers Sign Up to Stay Under Thumb of AAA.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Lately there has been a lot of fuss made by critics over the green document signed by half a million farmers and ranchmen in the federal government's cattle buying campaign in drouth areas of the United States. These cattlemen are among the three million or more farmers who have rushed up during the last year and signed, willingly or unwillingly, the dotted line, linking themselves definitely with the most gigantic production and marketing program ever attempted under the dictatorship of a government. Another million producers are directly affected by the operations of marketing agreements and licenses promulgated by the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

In signing these contracts and agreements it has been difficult for many farmers to unravel the legal language well enough to know what they signed. That is what caused the trouble over the green document known as the "emergency cattle agreement."

See Joker in Legal Garb.

In buying cattle for distribution to the poor the government requires farmers to sign this agreement, which provides that they must comply with any contract for production control that may be submitted by the secretary of agriculture.

Officials of the AAA have been severely censured for including that provision in the agreement. Critics say that representatives of the government took advantage of farmers and ranchmen who were in no position to protect themselves.

They interpret the legal phrases of the agreement to mean that signers are not only compelled to take part in the adjustment or production control programs to aid the beef cattlemen and the dairy industry, but that the contract applies to agreements for corn, hogs, wheat, and other commodities.

"Deplorable and Inexcusable."

"And it is done in the guise of relief," says this editor. "It seems inconceivable in our American democracy. It is a tragic betrayal of liberty and freedom by a coterie of willful men obsessed with a theory and recognizing no moral or legal limitation to their dictatorial authority."

He labels it "a deplorable and inexcusable requirement in return for aid extended to those in dire distress."

The only protection the signers of this agreement have is the possibility that the secretary of agriculture may not be able legally to secure its enforcement," adds this editor. "We are not lawyers, but we seem to recall that contracts signed under duress are not enforceable. At least we still have faith that our American courts would so construe this drouth relief contract.

This article is the second of a series on burocracy and the farmer. Others will follow.

Results of Corn Tests.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

October 1, 1934.

FINAL inspection of the corn grown in test plots at THE TRIBUNE experimental farm has been made by Dr. James Holbert of Bloomington, Ill., one of the official observers who has kept his eye on the experiment all summer, and Clarence Thurow, manager. Dr. Holbert is confident that the test this year will demonstrate many valuable points to corn growers in northern Illinois.

During the winter plans for next year's plantings will be worked out under the supervision of Dr. Holbert, senior agronomist and corn breeding investigator for the federal government. Selection of varieties and strains of corn for tests next season will be based to some extent on the showing made this year. No doubt some of the hybrids grown this season will be eliminated from the 1935 tests because the normal season is not long enough for them to reach full maturity this far north.

Estimates of the tonnage of corn cut from fields where hybrid strains were grown this year indicate that the yields of hybrids Nos. 611, 612, 915, and 214 are slightly higher than Western Plowman and a common white variety. Forty acres of these hybrids produced 180 tons of silage, an average of 4½ tons to the acre. Thirty acres of Western Plowman and ten acres of the white corn produced only 160 tons or an average of 4 tons to the acre. No. 214 was the highest yielder of the hybrids grown in the field.

During the next few weeks all of the corn on the test plots will be cut and actual weights of the entire crop of fodder will be taken and then the ears and stover will be weighed separately. In this way yields will be accurately determined. This will indicate the highest producers of ensilage corn and also ear corn.

At the end of last week men at the farm completed filling the new silo. Corn from nearly 100 acres was cut and blown into the silo, which holds approximately 420 tons.

The silage was allowed to settle over the week-end and a few more tons of freshly cut corn will be blown in so the silo will be brim full.

BYRD AUTOGYRO CRASHES IN SNOW PILOT IS INJURED

Plane Is Wrecked After Tripping Over Ledge.

WILLIAM McCORMICK.

McCormick took off at 2:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon on his tenth atmospheric sounding flight for the meteorological department. It had been cloudy all morning but shortly after noon the sky cleared and it was decided to make the flight.

Weather changes here with amazing swiftness. The sky commenced to fill with clouds and 200 feet aloft McCormick encountered strong westerly winds. After bucking the wind a while he decided not to continue the flight, turned around and returned to Little America for a landing. He landed just behind the small mountain of snow The plane hadn't run more than a few feet when the left ski tripped over a ridge of hard snow.

The plane skidded a few feet on its left wing which collapsed. The left ski was twisted around its pedestal, the rotor blades broke off as they threshed around in the hard snow. McCormick's left arm was caught under the plane but wen who were working nearby released him.

Dr. Louis H. Potaka, the medical officer, was helping to dig out the Fairchild plane on the ridge half a mile east of the camp and Ed Moody was dispatched to bring him in.

In order to get him into this buried community with the least possible pain, McCormick was lowered through a hole broken in the roof of one of the tunnels and carried to the library in the science building. Admiral Byrd on being informed at Bolling advance weather base radioed McCormick:

14 Milk Station Operators Named in Bulk Sale Suits

Sixteen suits charging violation of the state pure food laws, the first suits of their kind to be brought in Cook county, were filed yesterday in the county court against 14 operators of 15 roadside bulk milk depots.

Simultaneous with filing of the suits came the announcement from Horace I. Lepman, superintendent of foods and dairies for the state department of agriculture, that, effective yesterday, sale of milk in bulk has been prohibited.

The announcement is the outcome of a period of grace allowed to bulk milk depot owners a month ago, whereby they were warned to cease their bulk sales under an interpretation of the state food laws which permits the food and dairy superintendent to make rules and regulations to safeguard the public in its purchase of food products.

Only One Chicago Depot.

The defendants are charged variously with selling uninspected, contaminated or adulterated milk, in improper containers, and in insanitary surroundings. Fines of $15 to $100 are provided for each offence, Mr. Lepman said. The suits were filed by Assistant Attorney General Louis Salinger with the aid of Lepman. The defendants are:

PHILIP McLAUGHLIN, 6653 West Grand avenue.

A. LANDSTROM, doing business as [1] Dairy Maid Products, 7310 Irving Park boulevard, Norwood Park township, and [2] Harlem Dairy, Harlem avenue and Forest Preserve drive, Norwood Park township.

ZERIL RAPPORT, doing business as Wisconsin Farmers' Dairy Products, 12306 South Halsted street, Calumet Park.

E. OTT, doing business as Village Dairy Products, 1410 West Harrison street, Maywood.

Salinger and Lepman explained that the suits were brought in the county court in order to centralize such prosecutions. County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki has indicated he will assign a judge from his staf to hear all such suits.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The details of the British government's scheme to abolish overcrowding was disclosed by Minister of Health Sir Edward Hilton Young to the housing committee of the Plymouth city council tonight. The government intends to introduce a bill in parliament under which a standard housing accommodation would be laid down.

The measure will provide for separation of sexes of over 10 years of age and provision for babies and growing children. After a national survey, local authorities will be required to provide new homes at appropriate rentals. They will be given the power to acquire and redevelop inner areas in industrial towns, and, where necessary, re-house the overcrowded population in well planned blocks of modern flats. Financial assistance, if needed, will be furnished by the government in the form of subsidies.

The proposals also provide for a housing council to be set up to advise the ministry of health and direct activities of public utility societies and housing associations.

FIND PILOT, WAR HERO, DEAD IN AIRPORT ROOM

James C. Roth, 41 years old, world war pilot with a distinguished record who continued flying commercially when he returned from France, was found dead early yesterday in sleeping quarters at Curtiss Reynolds airport, Glenview. An autopsy performed by a coroner's physician failed to disclose the cause of his death and the inquest was continued until Oct. 16, to allow a chemical examination of the vital organs.

JAMES C. ROTH

During the war, Roth, a pilot in the American army, was detailed with the British. During more than 250 hours of flying over the German lines he was credited with having shot down four enemy planes. He was wounded several times. Before returning to the United States he married an English girl. The couple became estranged several years ago.

Roth was employed as the private pilot for Walden W. Shaw, Chicago yachtsman. He had been sleeping at the airport Sunday night because he was to fly a Stinson monoplane belonging to Shaw to Detroit yesterday.

MADRID, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Blanquita Suarez, singer and dancer who has appeared in the Americas, was badly hurt yesterday when she slipped from the stage during a number and fell into the orchestra pit at the Martin theater.

5 MORE DEVIL'S ISLAND CONVICTS FLEE TO TRINIDAD

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Five more bedraggled Devil's Island convicts, who escaped from the tropical French prison colony, came into port today.

They arrived in filmsy boats and were taken into custody at once by authorities. But the prisoners welcomed arrest in this port, for they know they will not be turned over to French prison officials. In conformity with a decree of the privy council in 1931, prisoners escaping from French Guiana are not returned.

100 WILMETTE CITIZENS FORM VIGILANTE BODY

A hundred Wilmette business men organized themselves into a vigilante committee yesterday to assist the police in case of disorders in the suburb. They were sworn in as special policemen at the village hall by Clerk Nicholas J. Miller. Three blasts on the village fire siren will summon them to duty.

The immediate occasion of the vigilante committee, it was said, is the picketing of cleaning plants and the efforts of outside interests to organize the workers during the recent Chicago lockout.

"They are still attempting to organize the cleaning plant workers," said Henry Brautigan, chief of police in the suburb. "While the business men will not interfere with an orderly process of labor organizing, they will be on the lookout for the first sign of strong arm work."

POLICEMAN FIRES 'EMPTY' PISTOL AND HITS WIFE

Detective Thomas J. Smith of the Albany Park police station was cleaning his revolvers in his home yesterday in preparation for going on duty. His son, James, 1½ years old, was playing near by.

CARDS, TIGERS JUGGLE PITCHERS FOR OPENER

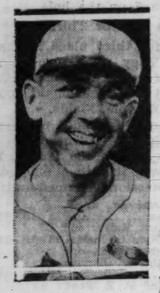
Frisch Decides on Rest of Lineup.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Frankie Frisch's madcap Cardinals, as cocksure of world series glory as their own great Dizzy Dean, headed for Detroit tonight.



BILL HALLAHAN.

They were a trifle exhausted and their nerves were slightly frayed as a result of their dazzling drive past the New York Giants for the National league pennant. No one of them knew for sure who was going to pitch in the world series opener, but to a man they were confident of winning.

Although fans and well wishers packed the station and overflowed to adjacent tracks tonight the team left. The booming of flashlight cameras was about the only noise that sent the Cardinals on their way. A few cheers went up as Dizzy Dean appeared on the platform of the special train and told the crowd "We're goin' to win." Dizzy was the only Cardinal to address the crowd as the train pulled out.

Sixty in Party.

About sixty persons were aboard the special, including twenty-two players, wives, club officials, and newspapermen. The train is scheduled to arrive in Detroit between 7 and 8 a. m. [eastern time] tomorrow and the Cardinals will practice tomorrow afternoon at Navin field.

"Leave it to us," promised Dizzy to the fans, who blew the old town wide open last night with one of the most tumultous celebrations St. Louis had ever staged. Then the big fellow, who clinched the pennant yesterday by shutting out the Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 0, for his 30th victory of the season, looked up Manager Frisch to make another plea for the right to pitch the first game Wednesday.

Dizzy Is Problem.

Manager Frisch was set on the rest of his starting lineup, planning on using the same team that clinched the pennant yesterday, but he was still uncertain as to the wisdom of sending Dean to the mound after only 72 hours' rest. He wanted to give his ace the assignment, but wanted him to get his chance at his very best.

Although the starting pitcher represented a problem to Frankie, experts tonight figured Wild Bill Hallahan would pitch the opening contest. Hallahan has had indifferent success this season, but he stood the Tigers on their heads in exhibition games this year at Detroit and Battle Creek.

In the Detroit exhibition, the one Dizzy Dean missed at the personal expense of $486, Hallahan allowed only five hits and the Cardinals won, 7 to 1. Most of the Detroit regulars were in that game. Added to his success in those exhibition games is the fact that he ranks as one of the greatest money pitchers in baseball, having won three and lost one in the world series in 1930 and '31 against the Athletics.

Carleton Next in Line.

If Hallahan doesn't draw the assignment, James Otto Carleton, who has a side arm curve that baffles the best hitters when in control and whose peculiar style of delivery always puzzles first time batters, may be named. Carleton is noted as a cool weather pitcher.

Paul Dean, star freshman of the team, will be a sure starter in the series and could pitch the opener, but is almost a cinch to follow his big brother Dizzy. Bill Walker is the other sure starter.

The rest of the probable starting lineup and the respective batting averages of each player follows:

Martin, 3b	.287	Collins, 1b	.333
Rothrock, rf	.286	Delancey, c	.316
Frisch, 2b	.306	Orsatti, cf	.301
Medwick, lf	.319	Durocher, ss	.256

Orsatti will perform only against right handed pitchers, being relieved by Chick Fullis in case a left handed pitcher works for Detroit.

Cochrane's Series Experience with Cards Dead Heat

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Mickey Cochrane's world series experience against the St. Louis Cardinals, is pretty much of a dead heat.

As Connie Mack's catcher with the Athletics in 1930, Mickey helped beat the Cards, four games to two. In 1931, with John [Pepper] Martin running madly on the bases, Mickey went down before the Cards with the rest of the Athletics, four games to three.

The Cards can gain an upper hand in their own feud with the American league champions by winning this series. They have won two and lost two, winning from the Yankees, four games to three, in 1926, and losing to the Yanks four straight in 1928 as well as splitting with the A's.

N.U. STARTS WORK ON PASS DEFENSE FOR IOWA GAME

Bumps, Bruises Only Toll of Opening Game.

Emerging from the Marquette game with nothing more damaging than a few minor bumps and bruises, Northwestern's football team yesterday got down to the business of preparing for Saturday's Big Ten opener with Iowa at Dyche stadium.

The Wildcats have been looking forward for a year to the return engagement with the Hawks, hoping to even accounts for that surprise 7 to 0 defeat last fall at Soldiers' field. Last year Northwestern was the first conference victim of Iowa's new power.

Will Build Pass Defense.

Although not satisfied with their showing against Marquette, the Wildcats feel that the game did demonstrate they were improved over 1933. The team had more dash and fire on attack and, while there was laxity on forward passes, its defense withstood the Hilltoppers' running game in good style. Coach Dick Hanley will spend much time this week in perfecting his team's defense against passes.

While patently weak against Marquette's passes, the Wildcats flashed an unsuspected aerial offense of their own which led to all three of their touchdowns. A leading figure in this attack was George Potter, whose tosses found ready receivers in Bill Henderson, Verne Anderson, Harry Leeper, and Bob Swisher. The Wildcats completed 7 out of 10 passes for a total of 158 yards.

Cruice Shows Improvement.

Northwestern's running game showed promise of developing into something more effective than that of last year. Wally Cruice showed that he had improved over his sophomore showing of a year ago, while new backs, Swisher, Bill Mole, and Eino Hayskar, added versatility to the attack.

A B C'S FOR IOWA.

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Coach Ossie Solem today went back to fundamentals in preparing the University of Iowa football team for the Northwestern game, after the poor blocking in the South Dakota game Saturday.

The coach spent most of the day in individual instruction, especially for linemen. Backs were given lessons on interference and passing.

Clarence Dee, first string guard, was the only player to come out of the South Dakota game with a serious injury, although most of the players bore minor bruises. Dee sustaind a torn knee ligament which may keep him out of the Wildcat game. Gail Lundberg, another sophomore, replaced him in practice.

Dwight Hoover, blocking half back, was still handicapped by boils but was expected to be ready for action by midweek.

OHIO FEARS HOOSIERS.

Columbus, O., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Ohio State's football staf took steps today to combat the passing and running attack of Bo McMillin's Indiana eleven, following return of scouts from the game Saturday when Indiana defeated Ohio university, 27 to 0.

Coach Francis A. Schmidt, who scouted Indiana, said the Hoosier ball carriers were "the fastest and speediest bunch of backs I have ever seen."

Interest in the game has led officials to expect 50,000 at the game, augmented by more than 20,000 high school students who have been invited as guests of the university.

McMILLIN WANTS 'EM TOUGH.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Although Indiana in its 27 to 0 victory over Ohio university scored two more points than the 1933 team rolled up all season, Coach Bo McMillin disregarded the triumph today in his preparations for the first conference game against Ohio State at Columbus Saturday.

"In all my fifteen years of coaching I never saw such a flat footed team as Ohio university was Saturday," Bo said today. "It was most certainly not the team we expected to play."

Foxx Signs 3 Year Contract; to Be Catcher

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, today answered the many reports that his slugger, Jimmy Foxx, would not be with the team next season by announcing the first baseman had signed a three year contract, and that he was expected to be the Athletics' regular catcher.

Mack stated Foxx will take over the duties of captain next year, replacing Bing Miller, who was released last week.

Mack also announced he had obtained Alex Hooks, first baseman of the Tulsa, Okla., team and that Hooks was expected to be a regular.

Can Still Be Sold.

Ever since Mack sent Mickey Cochrane to Detroit and Lefty Grove to Boston there have been rumors that Foxx would be the next to go. Even after Mack made his announcement today a baseball observer remarked: "Well, he still can be sold."

Mack gave no intimation what salary Foxx will receive.

Foxx joined the Athletics in 1925 as a promising catcher, but he was unable to work himself up to the first string assignment because Mack had Cochrane.

Jimmy also showed promise as a hitter, and Mack had Foxx play other positions. In 1928 he was behind the bat, at third base, and finally at first. His batting average that year was .328.

Hits Plenty Homers.

The 1929 season saw the Maryland slugger permanently at first. He wound up the season with an average of .354. He had his greatest year in 1932, when he had an average of .364 and led the league in home runs with fifty-eight.

Last year he led the American league in batting with an average of .356 and hit forty-eight homers. This year he had an unofficial average of .333 and a record of forty-four home runs, second only to Lou Gehrig of the Yanks.

Odds Shift on Series in East; Cards at 8 to 5

New York, Oct. 1.—[Special.]—A sharp switch in the betting odds, which, until the Cardinals terminated their successful nonstop pennant flight on top of the National league heap, quoted the Detroit Tigers as 7 to 5 favorites over the Giants, today marked the reaction of New York's baseball fans to the surprise ending of the baseball pennant race.

The Cardinals threatened to enter the first game of the world series at Detroit Wednesday, 8 to 5, favorites over the American league winners and 7 to 5 favorites to take the opening contest.

New York was resigned to the collapse of the Giants and the ending of all hopes for a Polo Grounds setting for baseball's fall classic.

At the Giants' midtown office, until Saturday the scene of feverish series preparations, clerks began the business of refunding all money received for series tickets. Only Bill Terry and a few Giants remained in town, the rest having scattered to their homes last night.

Ford Selects WGN as Series Radio Outlet

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The entire world series will be broadcast by W-G-N under the sponsorship of the Ford dealers of Chicago. The first game will go on the air from Detroit at 12:15 o'clock tomorrow. THE TRIBUNE'S station will pick up the broadcast as reported by NBC. Tom Manning, Cleveland sports reporter, and Ford Bond, NBC and newsreel reporter, will handle the running account of the games and Graham McNamee will describe the crowd and spectacle before and after the contests.

W-G-N Pioneers Ball Broadcasts.

W-G-N will be the only independent station in the country carrying the series. The Ford Motor company has engaged the entire National and Columbia networks, totaling 178 stations, to blanket the nation at a cost of $100,000 for the broadcasting rights and probably twice that amount for time, but THE TRIBUNE'S station was elected in addition because of its potency in Chicagoland.

W-G-N has a tremendous following by virtue of its own regular baseball broadcasts, a field it pioneered in the city series of 1924 with Sen Kaney at the microphone. Quin Ryan reported the world series the following year. For several seasons past Bob Elson has been W-G-N's baseball reporter, covering the Cubs this season both at home and abroad.

Open at Detroit.

For the CBS chain the series will be covered by France Laux of KMOX, St. Louis; Pat Flanagan, Chicago, and Ted Husing, who will do the color. Station WWJ at Detroit will make a separate broadcast of the big show, also under the motor maker's banner, with Ty Tyson, regular announcer for that station, at the microphone.

First two games will be aired from Detroit. Then the broadcasters will move to St. Louis.

HEYDLER NAMES REARDON, KLEM SERIES UMPIRES

New York, N. Y., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—John E. Reardon and Bill Klem were named by President John A. Heydler of the National league to officiate in the world series between the Detroit Tigers and the St. Louis Cardinals. It will be the 17th world series in which Klem has officiated.

THREE TIE FOR LEAD IN WOMEN'S NATIONAL GOLF

Virginia Van Wie Finishes 4 Strokes Back.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Playing over a course soft from rains and lashed by a stiff autumn breeze, three members of the American Curtis cup team, victorious over the British side last week, covered the par 72 White Marsh Valley Country club links in 82 today to tie for the medal in the 18 hole qualifying round of the 38th women's national golf tourney.

The co-medalists were Glenna Collett Vare, five times national champion and mother of two children, one less than three months old; Lucille Robinson of Des Moines, tall and sturdy western champion, and Mrs. Leona Cheney of San Gabriel, Cal., who has been a championhip threat since 1927.

They finished one stroke in front of Molly Gourlay, veteran British links woman, and Mrs. Carl H. Donner of Short Hills, N. J., who had 83, two shots better than Mrs. Harley Higbie of Detroit, who stood alone at 84.

Third Tie for Medal.

It was the third time in the last four years that the medal round has ended in a tie. Mrs. Vare, Mrs. Higbie, Maureen Orcutt, and Mrs. Opal Hill tied for it with 82 in 1931. Miss Virginia Van Wie and Miss Orcutt shared it in 1932 with 77.

The three pace setters of the 64 qualifiers who included eight players from the British empire out of a field of 149, topped the performances of their fellow Curtis cup players and the team's combined totals easily outshone the consolidated efforts of the British international team.

Collectively, the Americans scored 42 strokes lower than the Britons. With three exceptions, the British team qualified all of its members. Those who failed to reach match play were Mrs. George Coats of Scotland, 17 year old Pamela Barton, the baby of the squad and one of the youngest competitors in the field, and Mrs. J. B. Walker, Irish champion.

Champion Has 86.

Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey champion; Mrs. Hill, and Mrs. Burt Weil of Cincinnati, Ohio title holder, were grouped with 85's; Estelle Lawson of Chapel Hill, former North Carolina and South Carolina champion; Miss Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, the defending champion; Wanda Morgan of England, Frances Williams of Allentown, Pa., and Dorothy Traung, San Francisco youngster, had 86's.

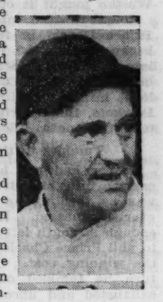
COCHRANE MAY NAME CROWDER AND SAVE ROWE

Fear Schoolboy Is in a Slump.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1.—The pennant hysteria that trailed in the wake of the Detroit Tigers' act of clinching the American league championship a week ago had 'ust about run its course today. The fans had quieted down. The Tigers themselves were a bit lacking in enthusiasm.

It all changed because of the newly arisen menace—the Dean boys from St. Louis. The famous Dean boys, not to mention the other members of the Cardinals, are coming to town to take up the matter of a world series starting Wednesday. Hereabouts there is fear over what may happen. Briefly, the Tigers would have been preferred to play the now punctured New York Giants.



ALVIN CROWDER.

Mickey Cochrane, the Tiger leader who is given much of the credit for the pennant winning achievement of his team, wore a worried, far-away look today as the new American league champions went through a practice session. Mickey always is worrying about something. He's built that way. But just now he is doubly perturbed. For one thing there are those Dean boys to think about; for another there is the problem of his own pitcher for the first game.

Rowe Loses Favor.

Ten days ago Mickey declared there wasn't any secret about the fellow he would nominate for the important task of pitching the series opener. It was to be Lynwood [Schoolboy] Rowe, the 22 year old sensation, and nobody else. After that it would be the curve ball star, Tommy Bridges, and the veteran Alvin Crowder and then back to the lanky Schoolboy, whose season of work netted him 24 victories. This plan, at least for the time being, appears to be in the scrap heap.

All season long Cochrane conducted his campaign on the theory that it was foolish to lead an ace against an ace. He figured that over a long stretch more road could be covered by gambling against the other fellow's ace and saving his own topnotcher for one of the opponent's weaklings. The scheme worked. But when he declared he was going to open the world series with Rowe he admitted that in a short series the plan involved too much risk. Holding over the ace to the second game would lessen the chances of the player coming back for a second start. The series might end before he could be given proper rest.

May Switch to Crowder.

Rowe isn't entirely out of consideration for pitching the opener, but Cochrane also has Crowder in mind. What caused the shift from the original plan is anybody's guess.

"It might be cold Wednesday and I don't think Rowe cares much about that sort of weather," was Mickey's only explanation.

The experts have different ideas. They point to the terrible lambasting the usually feeble White Sox gave the Schoolboy here last Thursday. They had him out of there in four innings, during which Rowe's effectiveness was melted into a bundle of eight hits and eight runs. Yesterday the Browns nicked the sensational youngster for six hits in three innings.

Is Schoolboy Worrying?

These dire happenings, think the experts, may be why the Tiger manager is swinging to Crowder. It is possible that Cochrane, guided by Rowe's last two appearances of the regular season, suspects that the young man may be worrying about

Carry Cooper from Track After Great Ride.

BY FRENCH LANE.

A jocky's fight against increasing weight resulted in near tragedy during the running of the fourth race at Lincoln Fields yesterday afternoon.

Reggie Cooper, from a jocky family—there are four brothers and all riders—last Friday found himself some 14 pounds overweight. At such a poundage there was no chance for him to get a mount.

There was just one thing to do if he were to continue riding, and that was to take off the extra pounds.

On Saturday and Sunday through long hours of road work and other long hours of perspiring in Turkish baths he lost twelve of those pounds. He was down to 105 at last and he found horsemen eager to employ him yesterday.

He's Up on Prince Charlo.

In the fourth race he was in the saddle on Prince Charlo, a son of Bachelor Bird-Pardner Jewell from the Southland stable of New Orleans.

It was a hard fought battle, with Prince Charlo back with the rear guard in the early stages, while Ruban's Choice, Polyphote, Cloido, and Westko fought it out for the lead.

Cooper headed into the stretch on Prince Charlo in fourth place. He began driving the English bred colt into a rally. Prince Charlo passed horse after horse until he took the lead in the final strides and beat Polyhote, the favorite, by three-quarters of a length. Cloido finished third.

Tumbles to the Ground.

Cooper had put his last ounce of energy into his stretch ride, which was as thrilling as any race crowd ever witnessed. He didn't have enough strength left in his frail arms to pull Prince Charlo up after passing the winning post. On the clubhouse turn he tumbled out of the saddle exhausted and unconscious from his great effort.

It was necessary to haul him back to the stands in the assistant starter's wagon and then he was unable to stand up on the scales to be weighed in. The weighing in ceremony was waived by the stewards and Prince Charlo's victory was made official. Cooper was able to walk later in the afternoon, but was not able to ride again.

It was a tough track over which Cooper rode the heavy headed Prince Charlo to his victory. The six furlongs was run in the slow time of 1:16 4-5. In the mutuel betting Prince Charlo paid $9.34 to win, $4.62 to place, and $3.50 to show. Polyphote paid $3.30 to win and $2.74 to place. Cloido's show price was $3.18.

For a fat man to lose twelve pounds in a couple of days would not be much of a task. Yet for a kid who weighs 120 or a debutante who weighs even less to take off 12 pounds in 48 hours is something else again. It makes Cooper's ride on Prince Charlo stand out as one of the heroic jocky feats of the season.

Quintal Surprise Winner.

The Hawthorne Lane purse for 2 year olds which brought out the best field of the afternoon produced an upset when Quintal, a daughter of Quibbler-Rubinette, was an easy winner from the favorite Watonga and Funderberg.

The race indicated that French Princess, the little sister of the fleet sprinters Siskin and Hygro, does not care to run very far. She opened up a wide lead in the early stages and appeared to be a certain winner at the head of the stretch. All of a sudden she decided to quit running and finished far back.

Jocky Paul Keester, after a week's absence from the saddle due to the sudden death of his father, returned to silks in this race and gave Quintal a million dollar ride in the stretch to make the offspring of old Quibbler score her easy triumph.

CLOIDO began slowly, gained fast in the drive, but was caught in close quarters inside the final sixteenth.

FOOTBALL COACH HAS ONE WORRY AFTER ANOTHER

First It's Victory, Then Defeat; What a Life!

BY WILFRID SMITH.

All football coaches worry. Some, however, conceal their anguish better than others, but they fret even while their teams are winning. Inwardly they rage at defeat.

Perhaps on Saturday night, if their teams have won, coaches can sleep eight hours without dreaming of blocked kicks or fumbles, but the chances are that next week's game and attendant fears parade through their slumbers.

Which brings us to next Saturday's football schedule, a splendid arrangement guaranteed to cause headaches at most Western conference universities with a scattering of intense worrying in other sectors.

There's Plenty for All.

Coaches Dick Hanley of Northwestern and Ossie Solem of Iowa, whose teams open their conference schedule at Dyche stadium, are awarded front seats. Close behind are two newcomers to the Big Ten, Bo McMillin of Indiana and Francis Schmidt of Ohio State, whose elevens play at Columbus, O., Saturday. Schmidt knows, so reports have it, that his line isn't up to the standard of last year's, and, more important, Indiana will invade the Buckeye stadium with the advantages of having played one game. The Hoosiers defeated Ohio university, 27 to 0, last Saturday.

Marquette provided Northwestern with excellent competition, but failure to add extra points after touchdowns kept Northwestern in the lead, 14 to 12, until the last five minutes when George Potter's interception of a Marquette pass started a rally which produced a third touchdown. Iowa ran over South Dakota, 34 to 0.

This week Coach Solem may worry about Potter's forward passes. Northwestern completed five passes in succession against Marquette. He must drill his Hawkeyes to stop such receivers as Verne Anderson, Bill Henderson, and Bob Swisher, not forgetting that Harry Leeper, left end, also made a splendid running catch of a pass from Bill Mole, a substitute for Swisher at left half.

That Crayne Fellow Again!

Iowa also can figure out the possibilities of tricks from Northwestern's "multiple" kick where Potter holds the ball for the punter. Suppose, for instance, that the kicker intentionally misses and Potter drops back to pass? Will Iowa be prepared? Just another worry.

While Hanley is straightening out Northwestern's running attack this week, which failed to register effectively because of indifferent blocking, he must take time to plan for a defense against the sharp line thrusts of Dick Crayne and the runs of Oze Simmons, a sophomore half back. Northwestern's linemen will remember Crayne from the game at Soldiers' field last fall when the Hawkeyes surprised the Wildcats, 7 to 0.

Notre Dame and Purdue have excellent reasons to bear down in practice this week. Jack Chevigny, former Notre Dame player, junior coach in 1931 at Notre Dame, and now in his first season as coach at the University of Texas, will bring the southerners to Notre Dame for Elmer Layden's début as head coach and athletic director. Layden probably has more first class worries than any coach in the country. Texas is pointing for this one contest and it will be prepared to meet Notre Dame's attack. In addition, Texas has had a longer practice period and a week ago defeated Texas Tech, 12 to 6.

Rice—and It's No Dessert!

Rice institute, Purdue's opponent Saturday, is Kizer's worry. Rice played Louisiana State, 9 to 9, last Saturday. Rice is joining Texas for the northern invasion. In between times, Kizer, athletic director as well as coach, may unite with Layden in a worry session, for if both Purdue and Notre Dame lose, or if either is defeated, how about attendance Oct. 13 at Notre Dame for the Irish-Boilermaker fracas? It should be worth $10,000 in additional receipts, at least, if Purdue and Notre Dame meet undefeated.

Financially speaking, Stanford has a stake in the Northwestern-Iowa game. On Oct. 13 the Wildcats play Stanford and already Santa Clara, by a 7 to 7 game with Stanford, has dulled the interest. Oregon State, Stanford, and already Santa Clara, by put another nick in the intersectional game.

Nebraska, winner over Wyoming 50 to 0, matched Minnesota's defeat of North Dakota State, 56 to 12, and Coaches Dana Bible and Bernie Bierman, on advice of scouts, can worry and worry before the Nebraska-Minnesota debate is settled Saturday at Minneapolis.

The Dear Doctor Hopes.

Pittsburgh is generally supposed to have one of the best teams in the country. Even if Dr. Jock Sutherland isn't worked up about Saturday's game with West Virginia [Sutherland is one of the most taciturn of coaches] he can hope that Washington State doesn't lick Southern California or that Nebraska doesn't down Minnesota. The Trojans and Gophers appear in Pitt stadium Oct. 13 and 20, respectively, and the Pitt stadium seats 72,000.

Dr. Clarence Spears of Wisconsin may have a few moments of worry this week preparing the 200 pound Badger line to meet Marquette. Harry Kipke, without such stars as Petoskey, Bernard, Everhardus, will pray that Michigan State's Notre Dame shift, directed by Charley Bachman, doesn't upset the Wolverines. Even Bob Zuppke, whose alert, speedy Illini meet Washington university at St. Louis on Saturday, can look to future games and find ample excuse for disturbing thoughts.

Bill Ingram's California eleven is perturbed over Slip Madigan and St. Mary's. Lou Little and Columbia can think about the Yale game at New Haven.

Then There's Next Year.

Stagg no louger fears Purdue, but he can dream of California and Oct. 13. The epidemic of fear is widespread. In odd minutes, and aside from impending games, all the coaches may fear injury to their key players. And if nothing else, they can wonder about next year's contract.

MOON MULLINS—WILLIE SHOULD KNOW KISSING IS UNHEALTHY

A ROYAL WELCOME I CALLS IT! AND AFTER ALL THE TROUBLE I HAVE WENT TO TRAVELING HUNNERTS OF MILES TO SURPRISE THE LAZY.LOUT!
AND THEN TO HAVE HIM GREET ME AT THE DEPOT IN THAT CONDITION.
I DIDN'T NOTICE NOTHING OUT OF THE ORDINARY ABOUT HIS CONDITION.
YOU MEAN TO SAY YOUR UNCLE WILLYAM'S BEEN PICKLED ALL THESE WEEKS HE'S BEEN AWAY?
HE TRIED TO KISS ME!

WISCONSIN PICKS FIRST STRING TO FACE MARQUETTE

Madison, Wis., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—After three weeks of constant shifting to replace players lost by graduation or ineligibility, Coach Clarence W. Spears this afternoon appeared to have gained a pretty good idea as to who would start for Wisconsin against Marquette at Camp Randall next Saturday.

First choices for the positions appear to be Nick Deanovich, center; Bill Millar, tackle last year, and Capt. Jack Bender, guards; Mario Pacetti and Jim Nellen, tackles; Russ Callahan and Bob Null or George Deanovich, ends; Bill Parrott or Carl Ockerhauser, quarter back; Eddie Jankowski or Clair Strain, full back; Karl Schuelke or Bill Exum, right half back, and Tommy Fontaine, Stan Ferris or Emmett Mortell at left half back.

Of the 17 players named, six are sophomores. They are Callahan, Null, Parrott, Jankowski, Ferris, and Mortell.

PURDUE BUILDS OFFENSE.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Preparing for what may be the toughest opening game in history against a Rice institute eleven that has defeated Loyola of New Orleans and tied Louisiana State, the Purdue squad was sent through an intensive drill on offense this afternoon.

Fred Hecker, assistant freshman coach who scouted Rice Saturday, reported the Southerners have a powerful offense built around Bill Wallace and John McCauley. Purdue spent most of the time perfecting the offense against the type of defense Rice is expected to present.

Ted Fehring, junior tackle who injured his knee ten days ago, rejoined the squad this afternoon and may resume his place in the lineup against Rice.

BEISE SLIGHTLY HURT.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Only one Minnesota regular was unable to report today as the Gophers were handed something more than the usual light Monday drill in preparation for the game with Nebraska next Saturday. Sheldon Beise was kept in the training quarters to get treatment for a leg injury which is not serious enough to keep him idle in the second game.

In his place today in the long polishing drill and light scrimmage was Stan Kostka, South St. Paul, who with George Roscoe, stole the offensive show in the North Dakota Aggie opener last Saturday.

Coach Bernie Bierman found many faults with the Gophers as he discussed the opening game in a chalk talk. Bierman said he did not contemplate any changes in Saturday's starting lineup, but indicated that some of the players are so well matched at certain positions that he would alternate them against Nebraska.

The scrubs learned Nebraska plays this afternoon.

HANLEY IMPRESSES LAYDEN.

Hanley made several long gains in Saturday's freshman game, and he scored once on an intercepted pass. Coach Elmer Layden said Hanley appeared more impressive than at any time during spring practice.

George Melinkovich, Tooele, Utah, senior, who was shifted from full back this fall; Al Costello, Akron, O., senior, and Tony Mazziotti, White Plains, N. Y., junior, who was shifted from quarter back, are Hanley's chief competitors. Melinkovich played freshman ball under Rockne in 1930.

Layden continued his drill on fundamentals today after going over the Saturday's mistakes in a chalk talk.

ILLINOIS WATCHES PLAYS.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—Coach Bob Zuppke today began to prepare the Illini football squad for the invasion of St. Louis Saturday, when Washington university will be met. Washington plays, as seen against McKendree college last week by Freshman Coach Wilson, were demonstrated by the frosh.

Zuppke ordered linemen to the charging machines as a result of faults exposed in the Bradley game. El Sayre, sophomore from Waukegan, looks like the best prospect for center. Frank Barnhart may be his understudy. The end situation still is unsettled, with Antilla, Wright, Dykstra, Nelson, Waller, Van Meter, and others as possibilities. Pass receiving by Wright and Dykstra gives them first call.

Semi-Finals in Softball Tourney Carded Tonight

Semi-final play in the Chicagoland softball elimination tournament begins tonight at the Spencer Coals athletic field, Central and Berteau avenues, when four games for the J. M. Braude trophies and medals, are scheduled. The Odac Indians will meet the Shannon's tavern team and the Parenti Boosters play the Curtis Baby Ruths. Two champion teams, the Hannan Kleins and the Nut House Café group meet in the third game for the trophy in the 14 inch, slow ball class. The Nevilles will meet the Eagles A. C.

Regeczi Out of Michigan's Opening Game

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 1.—[Special.]—John Regeczi, star punter, will be missing from the lineup when Michigan meets Michigan State in the season's opening game here Saturday. Coaches admitted his loss today, but tempered the announcement with an expression of the hope that he might possibly be able to play a few minutes.

Regeczi was to be discharged from the University hospital tonight, following a four day rest treatment for an injured leg. It was said he would be back at practice tomorrow. The slowness with which his injury is healing, however, suggests that coaches, trainers, and specialists really haven't any idea when the Muskegon Heights star will be back.

MAROONS RESUME WORK.

Coach Clark Shaughnessy poured on the vitriol yesterday as his Maroon football team, after its Saturday interlude with Carroll college, resumed preparations for its game with Michigan a week from Saturday. There was a good deal of disappointment with the team's showing against Carroll, though Chicago won, 19 to 0; and Shaughnessy spared none but Jay Berwanger in his post-mortem rankings.

There was indication of a shakeup as Shaughnessy experimented with a first team consisting of Bill Gillerlain and Gordon Peterson at ends; Clarence Wright and Coburn Whittier at tackles; Sam Whiteside and Prescott Jordan at guards; Patterson at center; Flinn at quarter back; Berwanger and Wells at the half backs; and Nyquist at full back.

Bush Back Tomorrow.

It was expected that Merritt Bush, tackle, who was unable to play Saturday because of a foot infection, will be back in a suit tomorrow. Saturday's only casualty was Harmon Meigs, sophomore guard and son of Merrill C. Meigs, former Maroon star, who was kicked in the chest. It was feared he had broken some ribs. An X-ray, however, revealed no fracture and he will probably resume practice late this week.

Today will be the first workout on the one-a-day schedule, and it also will be the first open practice of the season, with the public being admitted at 5 p. m. for the last hour of the drill. Yesterday's two rehersals were devoted chiefly to work on fundamentals.

Hope for Maroons.

It is the consensus on the Midway that the Maroons will appear like a different and better team against Michigan. The work of Wright and Jordan, sophomore linemen, came in for some applause, but in general the blocking, particularly by the ends, was considered faulty.

Lake View High Defeats Foreman in Opener, 13 to 6

Lake View's football team defeated Foreman, 13 to 6, in its opening north section game of the Chicago Public High School league yesterday at Welles park. Another north division game will be played today when Schurz, sectional champion, opposes Sullivan at Logan Square park.

Marshall's eleven yesterday was still celebrating its 12 to 6 upset victory over Harrison Tech, defending league champion. The defeat by Marshall last Saturday was Harrison's first setback in league competition since 1932.

The feature game of the Chicago Catholic High School league's opening schedule Sunday will bring together Mount Carmel and Loyola academy at White City. Each claimed the 1933 league championship.

Oak Park, co-champion, will meet Deerfield at Highland Park and Proviso will play New Trier at Winnetka in the opening of the Suburban league race Saturday afternoon. Evanston, which shared the 1933 title with Oak Park, will meet a nonconference opponent, Michigan City, on the latter's field.

Three games will start the race for the West Suburban conference championship Saturday. West Chicago will oppose Glenbard; York travels to Riverside and Hinsdale will play Downers Grove at Downers Grove. Maine Township, defending champion, drew a bye and will meet Morton.

Schurz, last year's Chicago Public High School league team golf champion, advanced to the final round by defeating Lane Tech, 7 to 5, at the Big Oaks Golf club.

TIGERS PUZZLED OVER PITCHERS; MAY SAVE ROWE

the series and that it might be best to let him be a spectator the first day.

Either way, it is something Cochrane is entitled to fret about. If he opens with Rowe and is beaten the second guessers will yell all winter about giving a 22 year old such an important assignment. If he opens with Crowder and loses the same second guessers will insist it was just what they expected would happen to an old man who wasn't considered good enough to win for Washington's Senators, the late champions.

Crowder has seen world series fire, so the importance of a first game wouldn't disturb him mentally. With him it would be simply a case of whether he had enough stuff on the ball, and he wouldn't have enough unless he happened to enjoy a rare day, such as he recently showed against the Yankees.

Watch Out for Pepper!

There's still another item that might be contributing to Cochrane's present extra load of worry. It's Pepper Martin of the Cardinals. Mickey and the Pepper have met before, and the outcome wasn't pleasant—at least not for the Tiger manager.

Way back in the fall of 1931 the Cardinals met the Athletics, whose star catcher was Cochrane, and not many figured the National league entry would give the Mackmen much trouble. No allowance was made for Martin because there has been nothing sensational about him during the regular race. But Martin came out of the series with the most amazing one-man achievements of all series participants.

Mickey Will Be Different.

In the first five games Martin equaled the all-time hitting mark for a series of that length. For five games he had an amazing batting average of .667, but he faded in the two concluding games. However, it wasn't his hitting that caused Cochrane so much grief. It was the theft of five bases while Mickey was catching. But Mickey wasn't himself that year. The crash had wiped out his baseball savings and there was no life in his work. Martin probably will find a different Mickey watching him this time.

Any mention of the Dean boys today drew only a smile from Mickey. "They're pretty good pitchers, but we have looked at some pretty good ones ourselves during the last six months."

Doesn't Fear Southpaw.

"Do you think it would bother your hitters much if the Cards should start a southpaw in one of the games?" was asked.

"I don't think so," was Mickey's reply. "We didn't have much trouble with Gomez of the Yanks this year and he's what you'd call an expert. Anyway, that matter of hitting southpaws is mostly the bunk. If a fellow is a good hitter he'll hit any pitcher, no matter which arm he uses for throwing."

The same old crowd that turns up for every world series was already on hand today. Most of them were scouts, club owners, managers and other baseball officials. They like to get in ahead of the pack and do a bit of lobby fanning.

Georgia Sends Tigers a Man for Cobb's Place—Jo-Jo White

(This is the ninth of a series of sketches of members of the Detroit Tigers, who will battle the St. Louis Cardinals in the impending world series.)

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1.—The state of Georgia made one contribution to the Tigers in the person of Tyrus Raymond Cobb and now has made another in Joyner Clifford White, who is treading the same center field grass that his illustrious predecessor roamed over for many years. White, called Jo-Jo because it is easier to say than Joyner, is not a second Cobb, however. He's lightning fast both in the field and on the bases, but that ends the similarity.

Jo-Jo, who is a witty fellow with a lot of color and apparently possessed of the knack of enjoying life, was born at Red Oak, Ga., June 1, 1909, the same summer that the Tigers were making their last successful pennant bid up to the current achievement.

Starts Out as Semi-Pro Infielder.

After the usual course of football, basketball and baseball at Technical High school in Atlanta, Jo-Jo branched out on the diamond in a semi-professional capacity. He went to work as a third baseman on the Georgia Power team, then managed by Paul Fittery, a former National league pitcher. Fittery watched the youngster only a few times and then remarked that he was a sure-fire major leaguer if given about two years of seasoning in the minors. Fittery missed by one year. Three years were needed to ripen Jo-Jo.

After Jo-Jo had been on the Power team for a season Fittery was promoted to the management of the Carrollton team of the Georgia-Alabama league in 1928. It was natural that he should advise White to go along. It wasn't long before another one of the Tiger scouts, who are everywhere, popped in to spend a few days watching White. By this time the youngster was playing the outfield regularly instead of third and short, for which he thought himself best qualified. Fittery knocked that idea out of his head.

Meets Mrs. White at Fort Smith.

The snap and dash with which the youngster moved around his position caused the scout to grab him up for future use. The rounds of the minors then started for Jo-Jo. For his 1929 schooling he was sent to Fort Smith, Ark., and the most important happening while there was that he met the future Mrs. White, whom he married in 1933. In 1930 he was moved about without any regard for train fares. He was at Fort Smith part of the time, at Evansville a while, and lastly at Beaumont, Tex., the finishing school of all the Tiger farms. He was permitted to polish up some more at Beaumont during the 1931 season, during which he stole 52 bases and, among other things, produced 23 triples.

He was called to the big show in 1932, but wasn't given steady work. However, he did one thing well. In his first game as a Tiger he faced Lefty Grove, who was pretty good then, and made two hits, one of them a homer in the ninth. His batting mark last season when he became more or less of a regular was only .252, but this year his average, like those of the other Tigers, has shown considerable increase. However, he is still a long way removed from being what you could call a slugger. His greatest threat is his speed, and opposing infielders must keep their eyes open for bunts when he's at the plate.

WORLD SERIES.

ST. LOUIS' inspired rush in the final month to win the National league pennant after their chances had become scarcely more than mathematical was most inspiring. The pennant, however, could not have been bagged without the even more surprising slump of the New York Giants, who had seemed justified in planning ways to spend their world series bonuses. Cause of the Giants' disintegration we leave to expert diagnosticians, merely surveying the new world series setup with satisfaction.

That satisfaction is not caused by any ill will toward the chesty representatives of the metropolis who were "in" and then suddenly "out" of the big money. Rather our satisfaction is impelled by prospects of a more colorful series between the two now determined contenders.

Pitching, in a majority of instances, is the determining factor in world's championships. Therefore Dean and Dean, Cardinal freshmen, against Schoolboy Rowe et al. of Detroit promise all the thrills in advance which the most exacting fan could demand, whether those thrills carry these heroes to greater heights or to sudden collapse.

New York, when regarded as winner, was a marked favorite in the betting to down the Tigers, who never have won a world series. That was because of their remarkable pitching staf headed by Carl Hubbell. St. Louis, with perhaps not as well rounded a hurling squad, has the Deans, and that is plenty, based on the season's record. Detroit has Rowe, Marberry, Auker, Bridges—apparently greater reserve strength if reserve strength becomes necessary.

Another field for speculation between Detroit and St. Louis is psychology and nerves. While the Tigers have been going to their title without particular travail in the concluding weeks, the Cardinals have had a nerve racking but sustained triumph. Will that strain impair their effectiveness through a letdown, or will they stay keyed up in this pitch which Detroit has not had to match in the final dash? One guess is as good as another.

To the Wake this is the most interesting world series of recent years both because of the circumstances leading up to it and because of the unusual personalities of several of the opposing athletes. We'd call the chances even up with the result hinging on performance of the spectacular Dean brothers on the mound.

Fable at Lincoln Fields.

Wake: A terrific dog fight among the stable canines had taken place during the running of a race at Lincoln Fields. A cur dog had been thoroughly whipped and started to run to his stable for safety. As he scurried along he was overtaken by an "also ran" thoroughbred which remarked consolingly, "Well, we were both whipped," to which the dog replied, "Whereinell do you get that WE stuff?" Ira.

Kitchen Rime.

I'll sing you some one else's songs
[Mine are such tawdry things],
I'll read some others' verses, too,
[My rimes all trail their wings].
I'll show you flowers in the neighbors' yards
[My garden straggles and dies].
But when it comes to feeding you—
I can make my own apple pies.

Minnesota Tactics.

Minnesota football policy, under the Bernie Bierman régime, calls for intensive scrimmaging for two weeks, then less bruising personal contact in favor of running, perfecting, and polishing plays—both with a view to improving offense and to avoiding injuries. These tactics are likely to prevail more than ever this year owing to the large number of veterans on the squad who have had defensive experience.

Perry Advances to Third Round on Coast by Default

Berkeley, Calif., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Fred Perry, England's world champion tennis player, moved into the third round of the Pacific Coast tournament today when his second round opponent, Robert Braly of Los Angeles, defaulted. Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, American Davis cup player, defeated Con Chamberlain, San Francisco, 6-4, 9-7.

BLACKHAWKS GET CHABOT, GOALIE, FROM CANADIENS

Await Word Today on Morenz Deal.

When the Blackhawks open the Chicago portion of their National Hocky league at the Stadium on Nov. 15, a familiar figure may be in the Hawk nets in the person of Lorne Chabot, black-haired French Canadian who tended the Montreal Canadiens' goal last year. The Blackhawk management announced yesterday Chabot, long regarded as one of best in the league, has been secured as the first step in a series of player deals now brewing.

Results of the deals probably will be made known today, according to William Tobin, business manager of the Hawks, and if they go through as anticipated, Hawk fans will find two other Canadiens, Howie Morenz and Marty Burke, on their side, while Lionel Conacher, who helped the Chicagoans to the Stanley cup last year, will be missing.

It's Up To Maroons.

At a conference last Friday among Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Hawks; Leo Dandurand, the boss of the Canadiens, and Tobin, the Chicago and Canadien teams agreed to a deal involving Morenz and Conacher, but would make no definite announcement until Dandurand had consulted with his board of directors, and the Canadiens had talked to their home town rivals, the Montreal Maroons. The conference with the Maroons is to take place this morning.

Under the tentative arrangement, the Hawks would send Conacher and Roger Jenkins, his young defense partner last year, to the Canadiens in exchange for Morenz and Burke, the latter of whom has been one of the Frenchmen's defensive mainstays for several years, including the period when they won the Stanley cup a couple of times.

Canadiens Want Crutchfield.

The Canadiens then hope to interest the Maroons in Conacher, with a view to trading him for one Joe Crutchfield, a former McGill university star whom the Frenchmen regard as the best young prospect to come up since Morenz made his entrance. Whether or not this can be arranged depends upon this morning's meeting.

Chabot is no stranger to Chicago fans, for they have seen him work with three teams in the league, the New York Rangers, the Toronto Maple Leafs, and the Canadiens. He has played on two Stanley cup teams, with the Rangers and the Leafs. Lorne is 33 years old, 6 feet tall and weighs 190 pounds. He will have to fight for a place with two rookie goalies, Joe Starke and Porky Levine, when the Hawks go into training at the University of Illinois rink on Oct. 13.

DE PAUL WORKS ON AIR ATTACK FOR ST. AMBROSE

Passing was stressed yesterday as De Paul university's football team opened drill for its second contest Friday night with St. Ambrose college at Loyola stadium.

Only three casualties were reported in the 33 to 6 victory over Ripon. They were Casey and Cowhey, centers, and Harold Carlson, tackle, whose ailing ankle is slow to respond to treatment.

Although De Paul showed well on offense in the Ripon game, defensive play appeared shaky, and Coaches Jim Kelly and Ben Connors attempted corrective measures in yesterday's practice.

Coaches pointed out that St. Ambrose is expected to offer strong opposition, following a 21 to 6 triumph over Central college in its opening battle.

CARDINALS INVITE PREP PLAYERS TO FOOTBALL SHOW

High school football players in the Chicago district on Wednesday night, Oct. 10, will see a demonstration by members of the Chicago Cardinals at Loyola field. Coach Paul Schissler yesterday extended invitations to all high school coaches in this vicinity to bring their squads to the Rogers Park grounds.

An important phase in Schissler's plans for the occasion is to show the youngsters how to safeguard themselves against injuries in their gridiron battles.

Paul Pardonner, former Purdue drop kicking star, will demonstrate his specialty; Homer Griffith, ex-Southern California full back and quarter back, will show his skill as a runner; and Lou Gordon, the veteran tackle, will demonstrate the intricacies of line play.

Schissler said that on Nov. 11 he will sponsor a place kicking contest for prep stars.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 1.—Bond prices drifted lower today on the stock exchange in the dullest trading for a full trading period since Aug. 28. The turnover amounted to only $8,481,000.

United States government issues closed down 5-32 to up 3-32 point in total dealings of only $1,660,000. Home Owners' Loan corporation and Federal Farm Mortgage corporation issues showed the principal declines in the government group. The called liberty fourth 4¼s equaled their closing low of the year at 100.11, off 2-32 point.

Speculative Issues Weakest.

Domestic corporation bonds were under pressure, particularly the more speculative issues, which lost a point or more in many instances. Public utility, railroad, and industrial bonds averaged lower in the order named. In a number of cases, however, the obligations of a given corporation failed to move in unison.

Losers of 1 to 3 or more points in the rail group included some bonds of Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago Great Western, Chicago and North Western, St. Paul, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Louisville and Nashville, New York Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Frisco, Southern Pacific, and Southern.

Other Groups Yield.

The industrials and utilities were more resistant, but International Telephone 5s were off 2⅜, Postal Telegraph 5s sagged 1½, and Warner Bros. 6s yielded 2 points.

Weaknesses in German loans, following their strength last week, was a feature of the foreign bond group. The German issues were down fractionally to 3⅞ points on the day, with the government 7s and 5½s off a point and ⅜ of a point, respectively. United Kingdom and French government loans closed lower as the dollar advanced sharply against sterling and francs. Latin American issues were irregularly lower in quiet dealings.

U. S. Rubber.

Investors' Guide: I am taking the liberty of asking you for information on U. S. Rubber 5s, due 1947.—S. M. G.

Answer: About half of United States Rubber company's tire sales are for original equipment. Although the profit margin on that business is small, it helps maintain volume. In addition to tires it fabricates almost every type of rubber article. A wholly owned subsidiary grows about one-third of crude rubber requirements.

Sharp expansion of volume in the first half of 1934 resulted in net sales for the period of $52,596,000 and net income after all charges of $27,000. For the corresponding 1933 period sales totaled $36,495,000 and net loss was $3,319,000. Profit was only nominal, despite the 50 per cent increase in sales, because of the unfavorable level of tire prices, sharp competition in almost every line, and large increases in both labor and raw material costs due to NRA.

Net sales in 1933 totaled $88,327,000, against $78,300,000 in 1932, $114,132,000 in 1931 and $157,075,000 in 1930. Charges in 1933 were earned by the slim margin of 1.02 times. Restricted volume of sales and heavy inventory losses during 1932, 1931 and 1930 resulted in losses before interest charges. Charges were earned by satisfactory margins in prior years.

Current assets on June 30, 1934, of $54,236,000 were four times current liabilities of $13,330,000. Working capital of $40,906,000 was about 70 per cent of funded debt of $69,376,000. On June 30, 1933, working capital was only about 48 per cent of funded debt.

The $65,872,000 first and refunding 5s and 6s, due 1947, are secured by a first mortgage on all assets of the company, subject to only $3,189,000 prior liens. They are somewhat speculative at present.

Wilson & Co., Inc., Stock.

Investors' Guide: I am interested in knowing what the split-up in profits is on the three classes of stock they have listed on the New York Stock exchange. They are Wilson, Wilson A, and Wilson preferred.—S. F.

Answer: Preferred stock of Wilson & Co., Inc., has priority over the class A and common as to cumulative dividends at the rate of $7 per share a year, but is entitled to no more than $7 for each year.

The class A stock has priority over the common, subject to the rights of the preferred, as to cumulative dividends of $5 a year per share, but is entitled to no more.

The common is entitled to all the remaining profits after the required disbursements on the preferred and A stock have been made.

STOCK PRICES DECLINE AS SEC TAKES CONTROL

Find Little to Help in Roosevelt's Speech.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 1.—Finding sparse bull sustenance in President Roosevelt's address to the nation last night or in other news of the day, traders turned to the selling side in the stock market today and prices of leading equities were whittled for losses running to more than two points.

It was the first day of market operation under the disciplinary hand of the government and selling started soon after the opening and continued in a steady flow. Although there were perfunctory, timid rallies from time to time, the session was anything but encouraging to those who had hoped for an extension of the rise. The turndown was negotiated on a total of 618,980 shares.

Federal Rule Begins.

Stock trading Wall street entered into the era of full federal control with barely a flutter of interest on the market's surface, for this aspect of the New Deal was thought to have been largely discounted. As things stand now the brokerage community is still awaiting the final draft of rules and regulations which will govern trading in the future.

Notice was given the exchange by the control commission that it had been registered as a national securities exchange and in accordance with the provisions of the national securities exchange act, it immediately made available for inspection to all persons copies of its application for registration.

The registration statement consisted of 26 pages of miscellaneous information that had been requested by the commission. It was supplemented by a 500 page volume of exhibits which gave additional details for the commission. The copies made available to the public at the exchange did not contain its balance sheet and other financial data which are in the hands of the commission. The exchange has asked the commission to keep this information confidential and the commission has not yet announced whether it will grant this request.

All Commonly Known.

Virtually all of the information in the exchange registration statement was a consolidation of stock exchange rulings and documents that have been issued in the past, or have been a matter of common knowledge for years.

The trend reversal was traceable in part to technical factors. Prices had been on the rise almost without interruption for the last several weeks, and it was felt that the market's technical position was weakening and an era of stock supply nearing. Consequently, when a selling turn was called prices proved sensitive to only moderate offerings.

No group was immune to the selling pressure, rails as well as industrials declining easily. Some conspicuously weak spots were uncovered among the carriers, including such recent buying favorites as Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern railway, and Union Pacific.

United States Steel, Bethlehem, and other shares in the steel industry were quick to reflect the bearish effect of the Steel institute's report of an operations slump. Resumption of selling in American Telephone brought the stock down close to its year's low. Utilities generally were easier.

BRITISH TO PAY $1,400,000 LOSS ON MORRO CASTLE

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Twenty-three days after the destruction of the Morro Castle the British insurance market has arranged to settle the claim for the total loss of the ship. Insurance policies on the hull amounting to $700,000 were placed through the British market. A similar amount also was effected there which was payable only in the event of total loss, making London's direct interest $1,400,000.

On the arrival of the usual documents arrangements were made last week for the settlement, and today substantial sums were forwarded from London to New York. The whole claim probably will be paid within the next few days.

The London Times' financial editor says that a quicker settlement scarcely could have been made, although the British market is accustomed to settle claims promptly.

Treasury Discount Bills Bring Average Rate of 0.28 Pct.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—The treasury announced today that the latest offering of 182 day discount bills had been sold on an average bid of 99.857, equal to about 0.28 per cent on a bank discount basis. Subscriptions totaled $243,169,000, of which $75,038,000 was accepted.

Bootless Talk by President, Say Leaders

BY HOWARD WOOD.

President Roosevelt's Sunday night radio speech was distinctly disappointing to the financial community. Stocks went down. Grains and cotton went down. Government bonds went down.

Up and down La Salle street the feeling of pessimism that has prevailed of late was neither raised nor lowered. The consensus seemed to be that the President's speech had settled nothing, promised nothing, changed nothing.

Among bankers the speech was apparently just about what had been expected, and, therefore, it created little stir. As for the brokers, some of them began to whistle in the dark by saying that the speech was "more bullish than bearish because of the promise of improved labor relations"—but stocks went down one to three dollars per share.

Many observers in La Salle street expressed the opinion that the President had placed himself definitly on the defensive for the first time and they were impressed by the tone of bitterness toward critics that they thought they had detected in his remarks.

Some figured that this indicated that the President had finally realized that, despite his protestations to the contrary, he would have to modify his earlier program along the lines recently suggested by his banker and business man critics in order to make it work and that he resented having to do so. Others were inclined to attribute this sort of reasoning to "wishful thinking."

One thing, however, was quite clear. The President had not answered definitly the six questions put to him publicly a week ago by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The President had not said when the budget would be balanced. He had not made clear whether the administration's intention was to debase the dollar still further. Nothing was said about collaborating with other nations to stabilize currencies. His answer to the question: "Is it the policy of the administration to continue the construction and development of public works not now needed?" was this: "To those who say that our expenditures for public works and other means to recovery are a waste that we cannot afford, I answer that no country, however rich, can afford the waste of human resources."

The apathetic response to the speech in business and financial circles yesterday seemed to be due to the fact that the President had explained the desirability of the things for which federal funds are being spent but had failed to explain how they were to be paid for.

Bankers generally were indignant at the implied criticism in the President's description of the manner in which the British had converted their long term government bonds into new bonds paying a lower rate of interest. "And let it be recorded that the British bankers helped," he said.

"I cannot understand," remarked one Chicago banker, "how any one can infer that the banks of the United States have not done their best to prop up government credit weakened by continued spending in excess of income. Banks in leading cities have kept buying government bonds until they now have more than a third of their deposits invested in such bonds. And as for the federal reserve banks, out of 2 billion 463 million dollars of credit which they now have outstanding, 2 billion 430 million dollars—or nearly 99 per cent—are invested in government bonds.

"It is unfair to compare the success of the British conversion operation to the failure of this country's exchange scheme. When the British operation was consummated that country's budget was virtually balanced and Great Britain was not facing the prospect of vast governmental expenditures in excess of income."

The break in the stock market came on the very day when the federal government was taking over supervision of the exchanges for the first time in history and was, therefore, not interpreted as the result of pool manipulation. Trading was exceedingly dull, only 620,000 shares changing hands on the "big board."

The renewed weakness in United States government bonds was disturbing to banks and investors because of the fact that the books are still open on the treasury's offer to exchange new 12 year bonds paying 3¼ per cent for the called Fourth Liberty 4¼s. The new bonds which the treasury is offering closed barely above par.

Traders in commodities appeared discouraged. There was nothing else in the news to explain the drop of 1 to 1⅜ cents per bushel in corn on the day when private crop estimators released slightly bullish reports. Wheat slumped nearly three cents; oats were down nearly 2 cents.

Canada's Silver Futures Market to Be in Montreal

MONTREAL, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The organization of Canadian Commodity Exchange, Inc., was formally announced today as the consolidation of the Toronto and Montreal interests sporsoring silver trading facilities. Trading will be in Montreal. The completed organization of the Montreal Silver exchange will be utilized as the nucleus of the exchange.

GRAINS SLUMP; WHEAT CLOSES 3 CENTS LOWER

Experts Cut Corn Crop Estimates.

Pronounced liquidation sent grain prices down sharply here yesterday as discouraged speculators dumped their holdings following failure of the President's radio address to clarify many existing uncertainties.

NAT C. MURRAY.

Selling was not extremely heavy but activity has fallen to such small proportions that pressure in either direction is sufficient to turn the tide. Early trading was duller than any witnessed for some time but picked up perceptibly on the extreme decline which set in shortly after noon.

Wheat fell nearly 3 cents a bushel, carrying the December contract to $1 and May to $1.00¼. July wheat, in which trading started officially yesterday, was well below the dollar mark all day, opening at 97 cents and subsequently easing to 95 cents. Early strength in corn was shortlived, despite issuance of an extremely bullish estimate by the five local crop statisticians.

Wheat Closes at Day's Low.

Wheat closed at the lows for the day, off 2⅞ to 3 cents a bushel. Corn lost 1 to 1⅝ cents, minus the 5 cent processng tax, with December selling at 76⅝ cents. Oats closed 1⅝ to 2 cents under Saturday's finish, December ending at 49⅛ cents. Rye slumped 3⅜ to 3⅝ cents, but barley refused to follow the trend fully and finished only ¾ to 1½ cents lower.

Winnipeg, apparently enjoying support from the Canadian pool, was unchanged to ⅜ cent lower. Liverpool closed steady to ⅛ cent lower, Rotterdam was unchanged to ½ cent higher and Buenos Aires was about a half cent lower.

Corn production was estimated at 1,420,000,000 bushels by five Chicago crop experts yesterday, against the government's Sept. 1 prediction of 1,485,000,000 and 2,291,000,000 at this time a year ago. Oats were placed at 522,000,000 bushels, against 546,000,000 and 699,000,000, while spring wheat output is expected to total 86,000,000 bushels, against 93,000,000 and 174,000,000.

Estimates on Crops.

Detailed estimates follow, in thousands of bushels:

	Corn.	Oats.	Spring wheat.
B. W. Snow	1,377,000	509,000	80,000
N. C. Murray	1,435,000	534,000	94,000
H. C. Donovan	1,445,000	490,000	85,000
E. H. Miller	1,391,000	553,000	79,000
R. O. Cromwell	1,440,000	523,000	90,100
Govt., yr. ago	2,291,000	699,000	174,000
Final, 1933	2,344,000	732,000	176,000

Murray estimates farm stocks of corn at 234,000,000 bu against 312,000,000 last year, while Cromwell places this reserve at 266,000,000 against 316,000,000. Donovan places the Canadian wheat crop at 255,000,000 bu and Murray at 238,000,000 against the government's September prediction of 265,000,000 bu.

Mrs. Miller estimates a barley crop in the United States of 120,000,000 bushels, compared with the Sept. 1 official total of 123,000,000 bu. She also believes a 3 per cent increase in winter wheat acreage will occur.

ARMOUR'S STOCK EXCHANGE PLAN ACCEPTED BY 92%

More than 92 per cent of Armour & Co.'s 7 per cent preferred stock was presented for exchange for a new issue of 6 per cent preferred before expiration of the offer yesterday, officials rvealed. Depositors also receive two shares of new common stock to cancel dividend arrears amounting to $26.25 a share.

By making the exchange before Oct. 1 preferred stock holders shared in the $1.50 dividend payable on that date. The plan follows capital reorganization approved earlier in the year.

With ranks of the holdouts thinned to less than 8 per cent of the 572,313 original shares, dividend accumulations have been cut to less than $1,190,000.

Economists Say U. S. Faces Inflation Orgy

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 1.—The country is threatened "with an orgy of currency inflation which will culminate in disaster," it is declared in a statement by 53 economists, members of the economists' national committee on monetary policy. The statement issued today appealed to the people of the nation to elect to congress only unqualified advocates of sound money.

The statement says that "there are developing today conditions and movements which point definitly toward dangerous inflation and to further mutilation of our currency system in the near future." It is further stated that "our commercial and federal reserve banks are becoming gorged with government bonds and are growing progressively less liquid."

The economists assert that "corruption of money means equal corruption of bank deposits," and that the assumptions upon which the recent silver legislation and the devaluation of the gold content of the dollar were based have proved wrong.

Cite Evils of Monetary Policy.

The chief results of the federal monetary policy have been "to change the scale of our monetary thermometer, to mutilate and weaken our currency system, and to inject into it provisions that will constitute an increasing danger to this country until removed," the statement says.

"We therefore urge, with all the earnestness at our command," the appeal continues, "that the voters of this country elect to the next congress only those candidates who, regardless of party:

"1. Will oppose any further weakening of our currency structure.

"2. Will oppose any further devaluation of our monetary unit.

"3. Will oppose any further pro-silver measures.

"4. Will oppose paper money inflation in every form.

"5. Will oppose bimetallism, symmetalism and the commodity dollar.

"6. Will vote for the repeal of all the currency provisions of the Thomas amendment of May 12, 1933.

"7. Will insist on a return to an outright gold standard with a unit of weight not less than the present 15 5-21 grains of standard gold.

"8. Will urge upon the government coöperation in the international stabilization of currencies."

Those Who Signed Appeal.

Signers of the appeal included: James W. Angell, Columbia university; Charles C. Arbuthnot, Western Reserve university; Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland Trust company; George E. Barnett, Johns Hopkins university; James Washington Bell, Northwestern university; Charles J. Bullock, Harvard university; Wilbur P. Calhounan, University of Cincinnati; Charles A. Dice, Ohio State university; J. Franklin Ebersole, Harvard university; Fred R. Fairchild, Yale university; Roy L. Garis, Vanderbilt university; Harry D. Gideonse, University of Chicago; Frederick C. Hicks, University of Cincinnati; Edwin W. Kemmerer, Princeton university; William H. Kiekhofer, University of Wisconsin; David Kinley, University of Illinois; Clyde W. Phelps, Chattanooga university; William A. Rawles, Indiana university; R. G. Rodkey, University of Michigan; William A. Scott, University of Wisconsin; Oliver M. W. Sprague, Harvard university; Nathaniel R. Whitney, Procter & Gamble company; H. Parker Willis, Columbia university; Ivan Wright, University of Illinois.

The signers declare they "believe it necessary for the country's welfare that the next congress shall have a majority who, regardless of political party, stand unqualifiedly for a sound money program.

"Unless such members are elected, we believe this country may be plunged into an orgy of currency inflation which will culminate in disaster and in the impoverishment of the great mass of our people," they warn. "We agree with the president of the American Federation of Labor that among those who will suffer most are the wage earners. Others who will suffer seriously are those who save and the holders of insurance policies."

U. S. TREASURY ENDS WEEKLY REPORTS ON DEALINGS IN BONDS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—(AP)—The treasury today discontinued its practice of telling the public each week how much government bonds it had bought for investment accounts which it supervises, and announced that reports would be made monthly.

"Too much attention," was the reason given by Secretary Morgenthau to reporters. "Not worth it," he added.

The announcement was coupled with the usual disclosure that the treasury's net transactions for the week ended Sept. 28 had been sales amounting to $1,204,000—at a profit. Morgenthau did not disclose the nature of the securities disposed of.

The weekly reports, nearly all of which have shown purchases, have been the subject of considerable comment, particularly at times when activity in the New York market indicated the government was supporting the bond market by buying.

BANKERS WILL HEAR ROOSEVELT AT CONVENTION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 1.—President Roosevelt will address the convention of the American Bankers' association to be held in Washington, D. C., on Oct. 22 to 25, it was announced today by the association.

The President will speak to a special session of the bankers on the evening of Oct. 24, in Constitution hall. It will be the first occasion on which the bankers in their convention have received a direct message from the President of the country since 1931, when President Hoover spoke before them at their Cleveland convention.

In addition to Mr. Roosevelt, the association, numbering in its membership virtually the entire banking strength of the country, will hear during their sessions from Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and Henry Morgenthau Jr., secretary of the treasury.

STEEL OUTPUT DOWN TO 23.2% FOR THIS WEEK

New York, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Steel production is at a slightly lower rate this week, according to the weekly estimate of the American Iron and Steel institute.

Output for the week was placed at 23.2 per cent of capacity, against 24.2 per cent last week and 18.4 per cent a month ago. The decrease from last week was 1 point, or 4.1 per cent. In the preceding three weeks the operating rate showed an upward trend.

Sterling Falls to Low Mark Since Feb. 3

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 1.—The pound sterling, which has been slipping steadily for weeks, broke heavily in foreign exchange today. It fell to $4.91¾, the lowest price since Feb. 3, and closed down 4⅝ cents net from last Saturday.

Under the influence of sterling's pronounced weakness, all other foreign exchanges cheapened against the dollar and the latter touched par of exchange in terms of the franc for the first time since Aug 9.

French francs closed at 6.63½ cents, indicating a dollar worth 59.03 against 58.95 cents Saturday. At the finish the dollar was 3 points from parity.

See Seasonal Move.

Conservative opinion ascribed the slump in the pound to seasonal influences or to the purchases of dollars to cover British buying of American raw materials, as this is the season when England has to pay heavy bills in America.

London traders held the belief that the pound would soon reach its old dollar parity of $4.8665. There was an almost unanimous opinion that the dollar was undervalued and had been so for a long time. They pointed to the highly encouraging gain in United States' exports and the rise in this country's balance of trade in August.

The passive attitude of the British curreny control accorded with the prevailing view that the British wish to see the pound devalued to the same extent that the dollar has been. In addition, however, it is widely believed that the British fund has been weakened in its activities earlier in the year in maintaining a stable sterling rate.

Forced To Aid Pound.

Following the revaluation of the dollar earlier this year, the British were compelled to support the pound for fear that if the pound dropped rapidly down in the wake of the dollar it might topple France and the other gold standard countries off the gold standard, thereby deepening the confusion in the world currency position.

It was not until August that the British control apparently felt it was safe to begin the cheapening of the pound. It was then allowed to sink rapidly against the franc, but at the end of August a temporary halt was called which lasted during most of September.

RFC Cuts Bank Stock Rate to Expand Credit

In a new attempt to make it easier for banks to extend credit to industry and business, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, announced in Washington yesterday that the RFC is reducing its interest rates on preferred stock and capital notes purchased by it from banks and financial institutions throughout the country.

Jones said that the RFC will charge 3½ per cent instead of 4 per cent during the period from Jan. 1, 1935, to April 1, 1939, and 4 per cent instead of 5 per cent after April 1, 1939. The reduced rates, he explained, will apply to all the securities already owned by the RFC as well as to purchases to be made during the remainder of the year.

Cuts Cash Payment to RFC.

The effect of the reduction will be to cut the amount which banks and other financial institutions must pay to the RFC annually. This, in the opinion of the RFC officials, will increase the money held by banks which may be loaned to industry.

The RFC owns $50,000,000 preferred stock in the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company which under the 4 per cent rate must pay $2,000,000 in interest annually. Under the 3½ per cent rate the bank will pay $1,750,000 annually, a savings of $250,000 which may be diverted to other purposes. The RFC owns $25,000,000 of preferred stock in the First National Bank of Chicago which will save $125,000 annually.

In making his announcement, Jones disclosed that of the $1,162,000,000 of preferred stock and notes which congress has authorized the RFC to purchase in 6,692 banks, there has been actually disbursed $890,774,500 to 5,392 banks.

Would Aid Trust Companies.

The RFC chairman hopes that the reduction in rates will be an incentive to the organization of trust companies specializing in mortgages, contributing to the effort to clear up the channels of this type of lending. He added that the new program was adopted with the approval of the President.

The administration has been trying to force banks to grant more credit to industry and business in the hope that this would result in greater industrial activity. However, the banks have been unable to find many satisfactory loans that do not involve possible losses. Their coffers are already stocked with cash and government bonds.

August Loan Figures.

The RFC also revealed that loans and commitments aggregated $188,826,666 during August, exclusive of advances to other federal agencies. Of the total authorizations, $108,423,008 went in direct loans to banks and trust companies, related financial institutions, and the railroads.

Actual cash disbursements by the corporation during the month were considerably less than its authorizations, as only $39,200,481 was actually advanced to banks in direct loans.

Among repayments to the RFC in August of loans outstanding prior to that month were $21,092,622 from banks and trust companies, including some in receivership; $25,089,678 from mortgage loan companies, and $12,165,236 from railroads.

BENDIX CONCERN WILL ENTER AIR CONDITION FIELD

Vincent Bendix, in a letter to stockholders of the Automatic Products corporation, announces that the company has become the majority stockholder of the General Water Treatment corporation and its subsidiaries, the Permutit companies and the American Zeolite company. This also marks the entrance of the company into the air conditioning field.

"The majority control was accomplished through a share for share exchange of Automatic Products corporation stock for General Water Treatment corporation stock and finally by the acquisition of a block of 23,000 shares of the latter stock, one-half by exchange and one-half by purchase at $7.50 per share," said Mr. Bendix. It was further stated that the business of the companies concerned has been unusually favorable during 1934.

RAILS OPEN RATE BOOST HEARING; SHIPPERS FIGHT

Lines Seek Raise to Offset NRA Cost.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—Facing substantial shipper opposition, the railroads today submitted testimony to the interstate commerce commission in support of their petition for an increase in revenues of approximately 170 million dollars.

R. V. FLETCHER.

"This case is based upon the crying needs of the railroads for increased revenues," said R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of Railroad Executives, in opening the case for the rail carriers. Operating expenses of the railroads, he said, due to circumstances over which the carriers had no control, had increased nearly 300 million dollars annually. He added that without an increase in rates the industry would probably fall short this year of earning fixed charges by $73,000,000, as compared with a similar deficit of less than $6,000,000 in 1933.

Recites Higher Costs.

"The increase in operating expenses is due to a combination of increased wages and rising prices of the materials and supplies used in railway operation," he said. "The wage increase was the outcome of a controversy in the solution of which the President and the federal coördinator of transportation participated. It assumed, therefore, the aspect of a governmental activity."

Restoration of rail wages to the level that obtained before the 10 per cent reduction was made effective in January, 1932, agreed upon by the railroads and their employés last spring, will add 156 millions to the payrolls, while an increase of 134 million dollars in the cost of materials and supplies, under the National Industrial Recovery act program, makes up the balance of the estimated increase, according to the railroad figures.

Other carrier spokesmen included M. J. Gormley, president of the American Railway association; Dr. Julius H. Parmelee, director of the Bureau of Railway Economics; and D. T. Lawrence, chairman of the Railroad Traffic Executives' association in eastern territory.

Cites Railway Efficiency.

Evidence to show that the railroads, despite the decline in trafic in recent years, were transporting freight with the greatest efficiency on record was presented by Mr. Gormley. He said that in 1933 the ratio of freight transportation expenses to total freight revenues was 30.1 per cent, the lowest for any year since 1920, when the ratio was 49.6 per cent. In 1929 the ratio was 31.3 per cent.

Reduction in operating expenses in 1933, compared with 1929, amounted to $2,257,000,000, or 50.1 per cent, Mr. Gormley said, adding that this compared with a 50.7 per cent decline in revenues.

Dr. Parmelee submitted a mass of statistical data in support of the railroads' claims as to financial adversity. In the first seven months of this year, he said, deficits were incurred by companies operating more than two-thirds of the railway mileage of the country.

As of Aug. 1, he said, twenty-six class 1 railroads operating 40,565 miles of lines were in the hands of receivers or trustees in bankruptcy. The railroads had net income of $30,000,000 in July last year, but in July this

BANKS' FUNDS SHIFT EAST TO PAY DIVIDENDS

Deposits Dip 114 Million in 87 Cities.

Gross deposits fell 114 million dollars in the 89 cities, excluding New York and Chicago, while respective increases of 113 and 13 millions were reported by New York and Chicago banks.

Individual deposits soared 132 millions in the eastern city and moved 14 millions higher here, but a decline of 98 millions elsewhere resulted in a net improvement for the country of only 68 millions.

Interbank Deposits Fall.

Interbank deposits dropped 19 millions in New York, 1 million here and 16 millions in the interior, a net decrease of 36 millions. The government added one million to its account with interior banks but no change was recorded here or in New York.

Banks in the 89 cities increased loans and investments 49 millions, but this advantage was cut to 38 millions net by losses of 12 and 4 millions, respectively, in New York and Chicago.

Collateralized loans were reduced 3 millions in New York, 2 millions here and 10 elsewhere, a total drop of 15 millions, while business loans expanded 5 millions here and 4 millions in interior banks, but dropped 2 millions in New York.

The interior purchased 15 millions of government bonds. New York sold 13 and Chicago 2. Holdings of securities other than governments gained 39 millions through increase of 14 millions in the interior, 30 millions in New York, and a drop of 5 millions here.

UNION PACIFIC GETS ANOTHER 110 MILE TRAIN

Will Run Between Chicago and Los Angeles.

A new six car streamlined train built for the Union Pacific railroad by the Pullman Car and Manufacturing corporation left Chicago early yesterday morning bound for Omaha via the Chicago and North Western. The western road's latest challenge in America's demand for speed will not extend itself on its first "breaking in" run.

However, after its arrival at Omaha the train, which is said to have a maximum speed of 110 miles and a cruising speed of 90 miles an hour, will be given a series of tests that will show how fast it can go. It is the second streamlined train to be delivered to the Union Pacific. Two more, each of nine cars, will be finished during the winter.

Aluminum Alloy Used.

The new train is similar in design to one delivered to the road last February. It is constructed of aluminum alloy and consists of a power car, a mail-baggage car, three Pullman sleeping cars, and a coach buffet car.

Powered by a 12 cylinder Diesel engine of 900 horse power, the new train when placed in service between Chicago and Los Angeles is expected to be able to clip an entire business day off the run. The Diesel engine is directly connected to a generator which will provide electricity for the four traction motors on the trucks of the motor car.

The new train is air conditioned throughout and also has a number of new features. Each of the Pullman cars, which has accommodations for 68 persons, has two extra long sections for tall persons.

Berths Have New Features.

The berths, both upper and lower, have a collapsible washbowl and an illuminated mirror. Sliding aluminum panels make each berth, in effect, small individual rooms.

Passengers in the upper berths will use a folding stairway with a platform at the top sufficiently large to permit one to stand while dressing.

Instead of two windows to each section in the conventional Pullman, the new cars have one wide window of double shatterproof plate glass which will be sealed permanently to exclude dust and dirt. The air conditioning apparatus changes the air in the car every four minutes.

The weight of the new train is about 200 tons, compared with about 700 tons for an old style six car train. The length is 375 feet 11 inches.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—Common carrier property of the Chicago Union Station company was valued at $46,540,000 for rate making purposes as of Dec. 31, 1927, in a valuation report made public today by the interstate commerce commission. Property owned but not used was valued at $2,850,000.

On date of valuation the company had outstanding a total par value o. $27,898,345 in stock and long term debt of which $2,800,000 represented common stock, $67,000,000 funded debt, and $28,098,345 non-negotiable debt to its proprietary companies—the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Pennsylvania, and the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis railroad companies.

The commission said the investment of the company in road, including land, no equipment being owned, was stated in its books on date of valuation as $95,211,045.

CANADA PONDERS TAKING OVER ALL GRAIN MARKETING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 1.—The Canadian government, which through its wheat price stabilization undertaking is losing one and one-half million dollars with every one cent per bushel drop in wheat prices, is contemplating taking over the entire marketing machinery and virtually closing down the Winnipeg grain exchange as a wheat trading organization.

This action, it became known here today, is likely to be the answer to a protest by John I. McFarland, general manager of the Western Wheat Pools, against selling operations in the Winnipeg pit which constitutes a serious challenge to the government's price stabilization arrangement.

Encouraged by low Argentine prices, British, American, and Canadian interests are alleged to have dumped millions of bushels on the Winnipeg market through short sales, confident they could break stabilization arrangements and cover their short sales at greatly lowered prices.

BANK OF HARVEY PAYS 10 PER CENT TO DEPOSITORS

Depositors of the Bank of Harvey, Harvey, Ill., yesterday received a payment of 10 per cent on deposits, amounting to $62,534. This is the third payment to be made since the bank closed and brings the total to 30 per cent.

In addition to this payment $45,033 has been paid to other preferred creditors and $198,385 has been paid on bills payable, William L. O'Connell, receiver, stated. Of the 10 per cent to be paid 8½ per cent has been acquired in the ordinary course of liquidation and 1½ per cent is from funds acquired from the stockholders' liability suit.

G. E. Reed, Banker, to Talk to Grain Market Analysts

Guy E. Reed, vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, will address members of the Grain Market Analysts club at a dinner in the Board of Trade grill tonight. He will discuss "Hazarding Some Guesses on the Business Future."

SUES BANK STOCK CORP. OFFICIALS FOR 2 MILLIONS

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 1.—(AP)—A two million dollar suit against a group of officers and directors of the First Bank Stock corporation was filed in District court today by George S. Grimes, a stockholder. Grimes demanded the defendants pay $2,161,250 to the First Bank Stock corporation, claiming they were responsible for certain alleged losses.

The court action sets forth the officers and directors on Oct. 8, 1929, issued 32,000 shares of stock to 1,200 employés at $42.50 a share while the "reasonable market value" is claimed by Grimes to have been $47.50.

As a second cause of action, the suit states the defendants ordered the same stock be accepted as security for payment of the shares and alleged this is in violation of the Delaware law. The suit further claims that of $1,520,000 due and payable on these accounts, approximately $1,000,000 remains unpaid.

As a third cause, Grimes claims in January, 1932, without consulting the state commerce commission, the defendants issued 19,500 shares of bonus stock to the same 1,200 employés without authorization.
